U. S. PROBES NEW LINDBERGH PLOT

Today

No Ten Per Cent.
Bright Spots Threatened.
Cheap Power Would Help.
Bad for Farm Values.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 10.

WASHINGTON IS waiting for England's proposition concerning the war debts. Mr. Rainey, of Illinois, says one billion, or ten cents on the dollar, the most probable proposition, is "sheer nonsense."

Mr. Rainey must prepare for another shock, for the proposition may include payment in depreciated British or other currency, and possibly part payment in silver, at a price about double the present value.

WOULD IT not be simpler to say to our European friends:

"Go ahead and default. It will be worth ten billions, plus interest, to know that your promise to pay is worth nothing."

One thing is certain—any political party accepting a ten per cent debt settlement would not stay in power long.

Without losing his temper Uncle Sam might say:

"You owe us the money. If you don't intend to pay, don't."

We could then proceed to collect indirectly.

YOU KNOW the history of the Suez Canal. Mr. Van Loon tells it well in half a page in his "Geography."

The French planned to dig the Suez Canal. A dull British prime minister objected, saying a short cut to India would hurt the prosperity of England's colony at the Cape of Good Hope.

But the canal was dug, and by that time Disraeli, a Jewish statesman who made Victoria Empress of India, and added Cypress to Britain's possessions, was in charge of British affairs.

Disraeli, with business sense, said, "Let the French dig the canal. Britain will make it pay," and proceeded to buy control of the canal stock for Britain. The canal earned forty million dollars a year, paid enormous profits on the British investment. Disraeli didn't make any money out of it for himself, as some others might have done.

PERHAPS WE can make extra money out of the Panama Canal, which we built, by allowing other countries to pay a considerably larger toll for using the canal.

Uncle Sam, making that canal a success, providing the money and engineering intelligence after the French failed, has been worth a great deal to the world's ships, saving them the trouble of sailing all the way around South America. They would be willing to pay well for it, especially if they had to pay.

There are other ways in which Uncle Sam could gradually get back the ten billion dollars that he sent across the ocean, most foolishly, to help foreign nations cut each other's throats.

W. A. SEDDON, vice president of the Seaboard Air Line Railroad, says:

"The one bright spot in the railroad map today is the movement of perishable fruits and vegetables out of South Florida."

In other bright spots similar shipments were made from Southern California, and many places along the Gulf of Mexico.

But "tariff reformers" have a scheme to wipe out those "bright spots". They would reduce the tariff on such food products, and throw our market open to competition.

This would mean that Mexican "perishable fruits and vegetables" would supply this country. Everybody has friendly feeling for Mexico, but Americans should eat things grown by other Americans on United States soil.

A TROUBLE bigger than the tariff perhaps is the cost of defective distribution. You can buy fruits here for less than one-quarter of what you pay in New York. It should not cost four times as much to transport and sell a grapefruit or an orange as it does to raise the fruit.

We have overdeveloped production and have shown little intelligence in improving distribution.

THE MIAMI Rate and Traffic Board recommends a reduction of 29 per cent in charges for all classes of electric light and power furnished to Miami and its citizens.

Property rights should and will be respected, and a fair price paid for everything. But it might be a good idea to regulate distribution of power along lines of public interest and fairness, instead of relying on the companies to regulate everything for themselves, incidentally indulging in such stock printing and selling plans as have sent Mr. Insull from Chicago to Athens.

Power is essential to modern labor and employment. The four essentials are air, water, power and soil. To permit a private monopoly of any one is not wise.

NORTHEAST OF Ithaca, Mich., a mortgage holder foreclosing on an $870 chattel mortgage covering farm equipment of Roy Marzolf, was roughly handled by farmers. They rolled him in the snow, broke his eyeglasses, then bought in articles sold at foreclosure for a few cents apiece, and handed them back to Marzolf.

As a result of the depression this might have been expected, but it is not admirable.

FARMERS SHOULD realize that present tactics will make it impossible to borrow on farm property hereafter, and also make it desirable to close out

WOMEN ASK AID AGAINST COYNE

'Public Indignation' Cited in Letter by Mrs. J. O. Miller

Declaring the late Senator Boies Penrose would have sensed public indignation over the present election laws and that the present recognized leader from Allegheny County, Senator James J. Coyne, has not the support of "thinking or independent" citizens, Mrs. J. O. Miller, of the League of Women Voters, has prepared a letter to Gen. Edward Martin, chairman of the Republican State Committee, asking him to take a hand.

Mrs. Miller asks Gen. Martin to state his position "in no uncertain terms" in support of election reform legislation, a city manager, and the elimination of the county delinquent tax collector.

COYNE POWER

She admits that from appearances at Harrisburg, Senator Coyne seems to be the spokesman for Allegheny County, but questions the strength of his support. She hints that more alert and progressive leadership might be expected if Boies Penrose were alive.

The letter was approved without objection by the league, and is to be sent to Gen. Martin.

The letter states in part:

"Were Mr. Penrose alive today, we feel that he would sense the indignation of the public over our present election laws; over the inefficiency of our gov-

FISHERFOLK TRAPPED BY HIGH SEA

Lives of 450 Periled By Gale-Lashed Record Tide

ST. GEORGE'S, N. F., Feb. 10.—(AP.) — Swirling waters of Bay St. George, backed up today under the force of a gale out of the Northwest, carried wreckage from a dozen coastal villages out to sea.

The bay, swept by gales yesterday, flooded the village of Sandy Point and forced its 450 fisherfolk to seek refuge in their attics. Other villages reported losses of fishing stores, boats and gear, and the total damage will run into thousands of dollars.

No human lives have been lost so far. Fear seized a dozen villages today, however, as a full moon threatened to bring the highest tide into the bay tonight.

WIRES DOWN

All communications with Sandy Point has been cut off since yesterday afternoon, when a telegraph operator told St. John's of the flood. The water then was at his door, three feet above the ground, and a short time later the wires were dead.

Today Sandy Point is an island. After crashing through the breakwater yesterday and flooding part of the village, the furious sea today broke through the narrow strip of land that had connected the point with the mainland.

Thus, if another high tide threatens the lives of the people of Sandy Point their escape will be cut off by the water, which now is flowing freely across the sand into the inner harbor.

They have boats, but it is doubtful if they would attempt to use them while the gale continues.

BOMB KILLS 18, ENDING MUTINY

Plane's Fatal Missile Brings Surrender Of Ship Rebels

BATAVIA, Java, Feb. 10.—(AP.) — Eighteen men were killed and 25 injured aboard the rebellious Dutch cruiser De Zeven Provincien when a naval fighting plane dropped a bomb on the ship's deck today, forcing the mutinous native crew to surrender.

The dead comprise three Europeans and 15 Javanese natives. One Dutch officer and one young Dutchman were wounded slightly.

The dramatic end to the mutineers' career came at dawn off the southwest Sumatra Coast when a concentration of Dutch naval and air forces bore down on the fleeing quarry and ordered her to surrender within 10 minutes.

REBELS DEFIANT

The rebels, defiant to the last, flashed a reply:

"Don't hinder us."

They failed to show a white cloth on the deck awning, as directed, in token of unconditional capitulation.

The attackers' reaction was decisive. As soon as the brief period of grace expired, a warning bomb was dropped alongside the De Zeven.

As there was no further sign from the mutineers, down went a 100-pound bomb from one of a half dozen planes in an attacking air fleet.

It exploded with a roar on the deck of the rebel craft, bringing death to 18 members of the crew and wounding 25 others.

That was enough for the mutineers who had been running wild for five days on the Indian Ocean with eight of their Dutch officers held prisoner. The natives signalled their surrender and then took to boats as a fire broke out aboard the cruiser from the effects of the explosion.

BOMBS IN RESERVE

The attackers were prepared to go much further if the first onslaught failed, as several larger bombs, up to 400-pounders, were held in reserve.

Meanwhile the cruiser Java and the destroyers and submarines, composing the pursuing East Indies squadron, watched from a distance, ready for immediate action should occasion require it.

The fire aboard the De Zeven seemed to have done little damage, as her wireless continued to work and her rightful captain, Commander Eikenboom, went aboard. He had been left behind in port when the natives ran away with the cruiser in protest against a wage reduction.

Eikenboom took command after quitting the government steamer Eradinus, in which he had been following the cruiser since Sunday. Naval escort was bringing him and his cruiser here.

Jailed Woman, 2 Men Face Grilling in Extortion

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—At the request of Roanoke (Va.) police, the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice today began an inquiry into the alleged attempt to extort money from Col. Charles A. Lindbergh on threat of kidnaping his second son.

J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the bureau, has ordered John M. Keith, special agent in charge of the bureau's Washington district, to go immediately to Roanoke and take charge of the case.

Hoover, after talking with the Roanoke police, said it appeared that there was the possibility of a federal charge of conspiracy to commit kidnaping.

Keith will be assisted at Roanoke by another federal agent whose name was not disclosed.

The Postal Inspection Service, meanwhile was awaiting a report from the Bureau of Investigation after its inquiry as to whether there would be charges of using the mails to extort money.

WARRANTS ORDERED

ROANOKE, Va., Feb. 10.—(AP.)—Assistant District Attorney T. X. Parsons announced today that he ordered the issuance of federal warrants for the principals in the attempt to extort $50,000 from Col. Charles A. Lindbergh under threats against the safety of his second son.

Parsons made the announcement as he was informed that the Department of Justice had entered in the investigation of the case which yesterday led to the arrest of Joe Bryant and Norman Harvey, young Roanoke men.

Meanwhile Bryant, 19, and Harvey, 26, and the latter's wife, Elsie, remained in separate cells, in the custody of the Roanoke authorities who yesterday arrested them at the end of two months' trail.

RANSOM LETTERS

Parsons and a special agent from the Department of Justice had before them all of the evidence in the case including letters allegedly written by Bryant or his alleged confederate, Harvey, demanding $50,000 from Lindbergh, whose first son was a kidnap victim.

It was indicated that local police would release the prisoners to

The woman was sentenced to ttwo days in jail on a disorderly conduct charge preferred by Mike Hoskovitz, of the North Side, against whom she previously had filed information charging surety of the peace and assault and battery.

Mrs. Sandora's attorney, Peter M. Cancelliere, said she was taken from bed Monday night and arraigned before Justice R. H. Edmundson, who sentenced her on the disorderly conduct charge. She is awaiting hearing on the common scold charge. Hoskovitz is awaiting further hearing before Alderman Thomas M. Geary on the charges brought by Mrs. Sandora.

$1,000 Keeps Duffy From Jail Release

A fine of $500 plus the same amount for costs stands between John Duffy and freedom on Monday from the Erie County Jail.

Friends here and in Erie today were reported trying to raise the money. Jail Warden Matt Hess, according to an Associated Press dispatch, said Duffy will be released if the money is paid. Duffy was sentenced to four months in the Erie jail last October. He pleaded guilty to government charges of failing to file income tax reports for 1929 and 1930 on an alleged gross income of $646,000.

Girl Swallows Fork, Saved by Operation

ST. PAUL, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—An 8½-inch table fork, swallowed today by Margaret Santell, 19, as she attempted to depress her tongue with the handle, was removed four hours later through a surgical operation.

An instrument which would have removed the fork through the throat could not be used because the four tines pointed diagonally toward the heart, physicians said.

GARDNER SEEKS MONACA 'RING'

An effort will be made by Judge Samuel H. Gardner to reveal the "higher-ups" in the Monaca Club when 12 employes arrested during a recent state police raid are called for trial. Judge Gardner, presiding in Criminal Court, would hear guilty pleas or pass sentence if the men were convicted. Judge Gardner said:

"I shall make these men understand that the length of their sentence will depend largely on their willingness to co-operate in determining to whom the profits from the club went."

All those arrested during the raid of January 28 are listed as employes. No grand jury investigation will result unless District Attorney Andrew T. Park asks for it, the Judge said.

Cold Wave's Grip Here Broken, Snow Due

The cold wave has broken, and today temperatures in Pittsburgh are headed upward. A low of 15 above is predicted for tonight with another rise tomorrow.

Missing the predicted official 5 below by seven degrees, the lowest reported was 2 above at 11 p. m. last night, after which the mercury started its ascent, and at 8 o'clock this morning 6 above was recorded at the local weather station.

Thermometers in many of the nearby boroughs reported subzero temperatures during the early morning hours.

Forecaster W. S. Brotzman said the center of the cold wave passed Pittsburgh during the night and is now centered over the eastern coast. In its wake is warmer weather, some of the mid-west stations showing rises in temperature of 20 to 30 degrees.

Surrounding boroughs today reported higher temperatures than yesterday. Dormont, which had an unofficial 7 below yesterday morning, today had 4 above at 8 a. m., a rise of 7 degrees since last midnight, when 3 below was reported.

DOG HOWLING OWN DIRGE

For seven years the family of Frank Sechan, East Pittsburgh, has depended upon the psychic powers of Sandy, a mongrel dog, to foretell disaster. Now Sandy must die. Visiting Judge S. L. Reed, of Cambria County, has decreed his death and Sandy howls all night long.

The killing of Sandy was made a condition of a six-month parole sentence imposed upon Sechan, who yesterday pleaded guilty to a charge of keeping a ferocious dog.

Sandy, last October, is alleged to have bitten Gordon Zawaski, 4. The lad, in a crowd of older boys that had thrown stones at Sandy, was knocked down and scratched. Both Sechan and his wife vigorously deny the child was bitten.

Mrs. Mary Sechan, the wife, said:

"Sandy never would bite anyone—unless maybe they tried to steal something or break into the house. He always stays beside me when I'm around the kitchen working, and at night sometimes when some one's going to die or something terrible is going to happen, he always lets us know—the way he howls. "He's howling now, every night."

Hotel 'Peeper' Alarm Fails to Net Culprit

A burglar alarm on the fire escape of the Mayfair Hotel, in Penn avenue, to warn of prowlers and peepers, sounded its lusty notes early today, calling a squad of police from Central Police Station. They responded and with drawn revolvers approached the fire escape. They found nothing. Hotel officials said the alarm pobably had been set off by an automobile which backed into it from a parking lot in the rear.

DRY FUND CUT OVERRIDDEN

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—The Senate Appropriations Committee today overrode its subcommittee and rejected a proposal on a 10 per cent cut in the $8,440,000 prohibition enforcement fund voted by the House.

The full committee also restored the prohibition against use of enforcement funds for wire tapping, which the subcommittee had recommended be eliminated from the bill as passed by the House.

The provision that informers might buy liquor for evidence, but could not drink it, was retained by the full committee. This was favored by the sub-committee.

Senator Bingham (Rep.), of Connecticut, an anti-prohibitionist, said "the wets were overwhelmingly defeated" in their efforts to reduce prohibition funds.

Hoovers Celebrate; Married 34 Years

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—President and Mrs. Hoover observed their thirty-fourth wedding anniversary today in a quiet way. A few close friends were invited for dinner tonight.

It was on February 10, 1899, that Herbert Hoover, a young mining engineer, married Miss Lou Henry at Monterey, Cal. He took his bride to China and together they traveled the road that led to the White House.

Girl, Ex-Convict Admit Kidnaping to Wed

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 10—(INS.)—A desire for "honeymoon money" with which to marry her ex-convict fiance caused pretty Miss Luella Pearl Hammer, 28, former co-ed at the University of Southern California, to kidnap for ransom the wife of one of her former professors and plan the abduction of Isobel Smith, a college girl chum, she confessed today, according to police.

W. P. Howard, 42, of Kansas City, Mo., Miss Hammer's ex-convict fiance, also confessed that he had aided Miss Hammer kidnap Mrs. Mary B. Skeele, 65, wife of Dr. Walter Skeele, dean of the college of music at the university, Sunday night, and hold her captive 24 hours for $10,000 ransom. Miss Hammer told officers:

"We released Mrs. Skeele because we felt sorry for her—she was such a nice old lady."

In her carefree days as a college co-ed Miss Hammer became acquainted with Miss Smith, also a student, and now a Pasadena teacher, the daughter of Dr. Merle Smith, a trustee of the University.

Miss Hammer admitted:

"Mr. Howard and I were both 'broke.' We needed money on which to get married and have a honeymoon and also to pay the mortgage on my Pasadena bungalow.

"I'm sorry we did it. We should never have picked on a woman as old and as pleasant as Mrs. Skeele. I want to see her and apologize, tell her how sorry I am we treated her that way."

Miss Hammer said that during a struggle in the kidnap car en route to her Pasadena home where Mrs. Skeele was held prisoner, "Mrs. Skeele bit me on a finger."

'OUTSIDERS' ON CITIZENS' COMMITTEE, COYNE CHARGES

SENATOR'S BID FOR PARLEY REJECTED

Foes' Group Doubts Political Leader's 'Good Faith'

Senator James J. Coyne today charged that the Citizens' Committee, which declined to discuss with him legislative measures which it demanded he support, is in its majority membership men living outside the city of Pittsburgh who are attempting to dictate how the city shall be governed.

He also pointed out that the committee was ignorant of the manner in which his Legislative committee to investigate the costs of government in Pittsburgh was created, and wondered if they were as poorly informed about the other subjects on which they claimed to have the "widespread approval" of citizens of Allegheny County and Pittsburgh.

REPLY TO LETTER

Coyne's statement was in reply to a second letter sent him by the committee, declining his reply to their first communication, in which he suggested that his committee and the Citizens' Committee have a round table discussion of the city manager form of government, the county salary board, election laws, the delinquent tax collector and school administration. He said:

"These gentlemen charge me with inconsistency for demanding economy in government while I have 'placed upon the commonwealth the cost of a Senate committee.' The committee of which I am chairman is not a Senate committee, but a joint legislative committee, which asked for and received no appropriation, and which has not cost the state, the city or the county a cent. I hope the Citizens' Committee is better informed on the other questions it raises than on this.

"This committee, which seeks to direct the control of government in the city of Pittsburgh, has a majority of members who live outside the city.

"They profess to have 'widespread approval' of their demands, yet not one of them has ever received 138,000 votes in a campaign for public office, as I did in 1931.

"I am sorry these gentlemen are not willing to meet in deliberate conference an elected public official that there might be direct discussion on the measures they demand he support."

The committee yesterday drafted and sent to Coyne a rebuff to his invitation to a conference.

SIGNED BY SEVEN

It was signed by Joseph Dilworth, chairman; L. M. Johnston, F. S. Guthrie, W. P. Witherow, William L. Dalzell, Grant Curry and William R. Scott.

The letter, which has been sent to Coyne at Harrisburg, answers his precious letter to the committee and also a number of informal newspaper interviews.

Coyne's replies to their previous letter taking him to task for his stand on the office of county delinquent tax collector, election reforms, the city manager bill and his proposal for an elective school board, are described by the committee as "bewilderingly inconsistent."

Coyne's legislative investigation of the cost of government in Allegheny County, the committee declares, is generally recognized as his method of attacking the school system.

CONFERENCE SPURNED

The expressed statement by Coyne that he intends to follow his own desires eliminates the possibility of any good coming out of a conference, the committee believes.

The letter follows:

"Your replies to our recent letter to you, as evidenced by your various interviews with the press and by your formal letter to us, are so bewilderingly inconsistent as to be quite incomprehensible.

"You are in favor of an elective school board and yet you are opposed to allowing the people to vote upon the form of city government they desire.

"You are in favor of economy, and yet you have

"1—Placed upon the commonwealth the cost of a Senate Committee, appointed at your instance, for the alleged purpose of investigating the cost of government in Allegheny County, but which is now generally recognized to have been merely your method of attacking the existing school system, and

"2—Insisted, and continued to insist, that a single individual be paid more than $50,000 a year for collecting delinquent taxes.

GOOD FAITH DOUBTED

"You have stated positively that notwithstanding our request you intend to follow your own desires and yet you now propose that our committee confer with you.

"In view of your expressed determination to do as you please it is impossible to understand what good could result from our conferring with you, and your lack of good faith in suggesting such a conference is too transparent to deceive anybody.

"Suffice it to say that we have already pointed out to you a course that is manifestly to the best interests of the citizens of Pittsburgh and of Allegheny County and one which we know to have their widespread approval."

ernment shown by the fact that we still have in Allegheny County a delinquent tax collector who has been collecting a net income for himself or the organization leaders of $83,000 per year for the last four years; that the state organization has refused for many decades to see to it that the State Legislature should draft and pass a legal and equitable re-apportionment bill; that nothing is done by the Republican organization in this state to wipe out the iniquitous fee system which is interwoven throughout the fabric of our state and local governments.

"Mr. Penrose would have sensed this aroused public opinion and would, at least, have met it half way as he did in 1907 and in the special session of 1912."

LEADERSHIP FAILURE

The letter warns that the overwhelming defeats sustained by the Republicans in many localities was due to the failure of progressive leadership in the party.

The reforms which Mrs. Miller declares Gen. Martin should approve include permanent registration, defeat of the bill changing the direct primary to the convention system, appointed auditors to serve in any election district in the county on petition of voters, prohibiting assistance to voters except in cases of specified disabilities, forbidding payment of watchers at the polls by party organizations, forbidding state, county or municipal employes from serving at elections and a re-apportionment bill to give the citizens an opportunity to vote on the city manager form of government.

She asks that the office of County Delinquent Tax Collector be wiped out.

If progressive action is not forthcoming she predicts that there will be a Democratic Governor in Pennsylvania.

ARREST MINER IN POISON PLOT

Following the alleged discovery of poisonous brass filings in the lunch basket of a miner employed at the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Company's Castle Shannon Mine No. 2, Michael Lucas, 46, also a miner, was under arrest today.

William Lewis, 21, told county detectives he found the filings sprinkled on sandwiches three different times. His mother took the sandwiches to a doctor, he said, and was told the substance was dangerous.

Lewis said he told the mine boss yesterday when he discovered the brass for a third time, and a search was made. County Detectives said they were told Lucas had a bottle of brass filings. When the man was questioned today, they declared he said he used them for sharpening tools and cleaning his hands.

Lewis said he knew of no reason why Lucas should have put the filings in his food.

HOME DAMAGED BY GAS BLAST

An explosion of gas in the home of Mrs. Mary J. Beatty, 142 Merrimac street, Mt. Washington, shortly before noon today damaged the house and broke windows in the neighborhood.

Mrs. Beatty, who was on the same floor when the blast occurred, suffered from shock. A maid, Inez Corrick, escaped uninjured.

Police said the explosion was caused by gas in a room in the rear of the first floor. It smashed doors, broke dishes and burned paper from walls, they reported.

Mrs. Beatty called the fire department. No blaze followed the explosion.

Orders 'Outside' Men Off New P. O. Job

Fourteen ornamental and structural iron workers were "imported" here from Cleveland, New York and Philadelphia to work on the new postoffice and federal building, while hundreds of similar workmen who live in Pittsburgh are unable to find jobs, Miss M. Emmelinne Pitt, local commissioner for the United States Department of Labor, revealed today.

Miss Pitt said the employment of outside workmen is contrary to federal orders and has ordered the practice stopped. The men were brought here, she said, by the Gorham Bronze Company, of Providence, R. I., and the Wheeling Steel Corporation, of Wheeling, W. Va.

STOCK PROBER HITS NORBECK METHODS

By WILLIAM H. DOHERTY
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—Protests against political activities by employes of the Senate stock market inquiry committee at the taxpayers' expense were made to Chairman Norbeck by David A. Olson, resigned committee investigator, it was learned today.

In a letter to Norbeck on December 8, Olson declared the investigation had been hampered because employes were engaged in writing speeches and preparing political material for Norbeck's successful Senatorial campaign in South Dakota. Olson said:

"It is natural that there can be no co-operation between employes if one is interested in political controversies and the other interested in the work of the committee."

PROBE EVADED

Olson said that whenever he attempted to discuss details of the investigation with James E. Stewart, of South Dakota, chief committee investigator, the latter "would invariably evade the subject and bring up the political situation in connection with your campaign in South Dakota." Olson's letter continued:

"I may be wrong, but I was under the impression that Mr. Stewart was paid by the subcommittee to investigate the New York Stock Exchange and to co-operate with me in such an investigation.

"I had not been requested by you to find a remedy for your political troubles.

"Being almost daily in contact with the other employes of the committee, and knowing they were interested in what I was doing, naturally I was interested in what my fellow employes were doing.

WRITING SPEECHES

"Much to my surprise, I found them writing political speeches and gathering data for speeches to be used by you in your senatorial campaign. I don't suppose for a moment that Congress or the American taxpayer would seriously object to the funds of this committee being used for that purpose if out of it came some remedial legislation to help our distressed economic conditions."

After relating the difficulties he encountered in conducting his inquiries, Olson continued:

"You are fully aware, as is Mr. Stewart, that the evidence secured shows clearly that many millions of dollars of income taxes, which have been fraudulently withheld, can be recovered.

"If no action is taken on clear and definite evidence in the face of such great public need, the public may be led to believe that the investigation is not in good faith."

Beamish Attacks Drexel Bank Group

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 10.—(INS.)—A real stock market probe by Congress would produce amazing results in this city, according to Richard J. Beamish, Secretary of the Commonwealth, who hinted local connections with international bankers would be uncovered by such an investigation.

In his address before the Reciprocity Club, Beamish last night also attacked the Drexel-Morgan interests for "stifling previous attempts of the Pennsylvania legislature to put private banks under the supervision of the state banking department."

Kennedy said these applications included $11,127,000 from the Chicago and Northwestern, and $5,000,000 from the Baltimore and Ohio.

Chairman Couzens pointed out that the B. & O. already has been advanced $67,000,000 on collateral valued at $76,000,000 on January 28. Kennedy said the additional $5,000,000 is to be lent on the same collateral.

BLOCK PROGRAM FOR ROOSEVELT 'DICTATORSHIP'

Hoover Spurs G. O. P. To Spike Successor's Economy Plan

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—The ambitious plan of Democratic House leaders to give President Roosevelt dictatorial power over federal finances—including the right to slash veterans' compensation and all contracts—collapsed today.

Instead, Senate and House Democratic fiscal experts began drafting a modified plan which will give the incoming President far-reaching but not dictatorial power.

HOOVER AIDS OPPOSITION

With excitement in Congress running high over the proposal, President Hoover encouraged Republican House leaders in their opposition to the plan to "make another Mussolini" of Mr. Roosevelt.

Representative Snell, of New York, Republican leader, hinted that Republicans viewed the plan as a deep plot to oust all Republicans in the government and install Democrats in their places.

The new plan, evolved at a conference between Speaker Garner and Senator Byrnes (Dem.), of South Carolina, and approved by Swagar Sherley, the President-elect's fiscal spokesman, would authorize a 10 per cent cut in all appropriations.

This is estimated to save $280,000,000 a year and is double the 5 per cent provided by the Senate.

In addition, the President would have power to cut salaries and all compensation, except contractual obligations. Thus the veterans would escape the economy act.

VET ECONOMY PLAN

Mr. Roosevelt, it was learned, has informed his representatives he will submit legislation to effect veterans economies. He holds changes in law must first be enacted to comply with the Constitution.

In addition to the new proposal, the new President would retain power to revise, consolidate and abolish bureaus, subject to a two-thirds veto by Congress.

The original House proposal to give the next President autocratic authority over fiscal affairs was discussed at the White House by President Hoover, Representative Snell and Representative Wood (Rep.), of Indiana. Wood said:

"The President favors giving power to the incoming President to reorganize the government subject to Congressional approval. I stated my opposition, and so did Snell, to the new proposal to give him dictatorial power and I think the President is in agreement. At no time has the President expressed his approval of abrogation of Congressional power."

Roosevelt Writing Inaugural Address

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 10.—(AP.)—President-elect Roosevelt is preparing his inaugural address while at freedom on a yachting cruise in the southern seas.

He will propose a sweeping change of government. His plans call for an extra session of the new Congress, if one is necessary and it appears that one is; an adjustment of the tangled international situation; and a program for closer state and federal relations.

In the new Congress, Mr. Roosevelt wants legislation to balance the budget, for farm relief, and for a reorganization of the government.

Meanwhile, the only official word from Mr. Roosevelt is that he is having a good time fishing and swimming off the Astor yacht in the Bahama Islands.

Jailed Briefly, Woman Dry Blames 'Spite'

ROCKVILLE, Md., Feb. 10.—(AP.)—Arrested and jailed—briefly—on a charge of doing construction work without a building permit, Mrs. Jesse W. Nicholson, prominent prohibition leader, termed the case as "spite, from beginning to end."

Mrs. Nicholson, president of the National Women's Democratic Law Enforcement League, was at liberty today on her personal bond pending a habeas corpus hearing on February 23.

She went to jail yesterday when she refused to pay a $10 fine and costs after Police Judge Donald A. De Lashmutt found her guilty of violating the zoning ordinances of Washington's metropolitan district.

Her attorneys requested the fine be raised to $11 so that, under the Maryland law, an appeal could be taken to a higher court. The police judge refused to raise the fine, so Mrs. Nicholson went to jail. She said she was held "exactly five minutes."

Habeas corpus proceedings were instituted immediately by her attorneys, and Circuit Court Judge Charles W. Woodward released her pending the hearing.

The charge resulted from construction at a filling station she owns at Montrose. She contended she had a permit to rebuild the portion of the station torn away for a relocation of a highway.

Mrs. Borah's Hero Doctor Blushes at Her Thanks

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—Mrs. William E. Borah, able at last to execute a long-planned adventure, went hero-hunting and sight-seeing in the picturesque Public Health Service laboratory from which came the means to save her life last September.

She sought out, and met yesterday for the first time, stocky, red-headed Dr. Charles Armstrong, psittacosis researcher who studying the disease, suffered it and from whose blood was taken the convalescent serum flown to Mrs. Borah, a victim in Boise, Idaho.

Before his chief, Surgeon General Cumming, whom she herself had taken to the scene, Mrs. Borah said to Armstrong:

"I came to thank you for saving my life."

And when Armstrong blushed, she banteringly added:

"I have some of your blood coursing through my veins. Now what relation are we?"

All through her convalescence, Mrs. Borah said, she'd been reading about the health heroes who inhabit the rambling red brick laboratory on the Potomac's bank, particularly Paul de Kruif's book about them — "Men Against Death."

CHIEF OF CLAN FREED FROM CHAINS

Group Calm After Two Days of Shouting And Chanting

INEZ, Ky., Feb. 10.—(AP.)—Calmly and quietly after days of shouting and chanting, eight members of a mountaineer cult today awaited a hearing on charges of "sacrificing" the matriarch of their clan.

Meanwhile authorities gathered together evidence County Attorney Jasper Preece said he will introduce at tomorrow's hearing in an endeavor to show that John Mills, 32, cult leader, choked his mother to death as a "sacrifice" while seven others looked on chanting and praying.

FREED FROM CHAINS

John, released from chains that bound him to his cell door, continued to decline comment upon the slaying which cult members said he told them had been directed by "Divine command."

Other cult members, who slept calmly last night after Jailer Dan Harmon ordered them to halt their weird and wild chanting, insisted that John had "misinterpreted "the message."

One, Blaine McGinnis, son-in-law of the slain woman, Mrs. Lucinda Mills, 72, told the county attorney:

"When I saw John choking his mother to death, I tried to grab his arm away from her throat, but I could not. I don't know how to explain it. . . I couldn't move.

HELPLESS ONLOOKER

"I just stood there and watched John choke Aunt Lucinda and even when John told Ballard Mills (a nephew), to go get him a chain, I couldn't do nothing."

Officers said that when they broke into the mountainside cabin of Tom Boyd where the ritual was held, Mrs. Mills' body was on a bed, her hands tied together with a chain that fell across her body and was tied to her ankles.

SCORES DRIVEN INTO COLD BY FLAMES

Scantily-Clad Woman Races 2 Blocks to Sound Alarm

Attired only in her night clothes, a woman ran two blocks in near-zero weather early today to summon firemen after fire had been discovered in her home at 11 Alpine avenue, North Side.

Many others were routed into the cold by fires throughout the district.

Miss Wilda Wolf was awakened by the barking of a two-month-old puppy, a pet of Mr. and Mrs. August Wolf. The dog was sleeping near an open fireplace from which a hot coal rolled, igniting a rug. The fire was extinguished by firemen of Engine Company No. 43, Arch and Jackson streets, with an estimated loss of $50.

TENANTS FLEE

A soundly-sleeping caretaker of a Troy Hill road greenhouse was rescued and the occupants of seven apartments in the Shadyside Apartments at 5113-5119 Center avenue were forced into the street in other fires throughout the district last night and early today.

The caretaker, William Helmich, 55, employed by Fred H. Riegelmeier, florist, of 1826 Troy Hill road, was awakened by firemen of two engine companies summoned by two still alarms. The house occupied by Helmick, a two-story structure, was destroyed, with a loss estimated at $3,500.

Sparks fanned by a high wind threatened another building which Riegelmeier had $8,000 worth of bulbs, imported from Holland for Easter.

Six fire companies, summoned by two alarms, fought the flames in the Shadyside apartments for more than two hours. Two firemen, overcome by smoke, were revived at the scene and continued on duty. They were James Kammitts, of Truck Company No. 14, and William Baden, of Engine Company No. 6. The fire, of undetermined origin, was confined to the basement, with an estimated loss of $4,000.

HOME DAMAGED

The home of John Lenz, 131 Overbeck street, North Side, was damaged $500 last night when fire broke out in the kitchen. The blaze was confined to the rear of the house.

Firemen from Engine Company No. 8 extinguished a blaze in the kitchen of the home of Frank Farina, 5890 Ellsworth avenue, last night. The blaze, believed to have been caused by an overheated stove, threatened Farina's fruit and grocery store in the front of the building. The damage was estimated at $100.

A grocery of John Clark at 7707 Westmoreland avenue, Swissvale, was damaged, it was estimated, $1,000 by fire of undetermined origin. It was the second fire in two weeks. The damage in the first was estimated at $1,500.

FIRE IN MACHINE SHOP

The H. P. Gazzam Machine Company, at Penn avenue and Thirty-second street, was damaged, it was estimated, $1,000 by fire of undetermined origin early today.

A fire starting on the roof of the store and home of William Datch, Maple and State streets, Clairton, caused a loss estimated at $1,000 late yesterday.

Three families were driven to the street by fire which swept through their three-story double frame house at 720 Doolittle street, East Carnegie, early today.

Flames swept two two-story frame dwellings in Sycamore street, Mt. Washington, early today, driving out three families, including eight children. The fire started in the home of James F. McDonough, on the second floor at 33 Sycamore street, and quickly spread to that of Mrs. Clara Wells, next door. Damage was estimated at $4,000.

LUCREZIA BORI LEADS FIGHT TO SAVE OPERA

Famed Singer Seeking Funds for Sinking Metropolitan

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—Lucrezia Bori, of the magic voice, found herself today the leading lady in a real-life drama whose denouement is as yet unwritten. She was named to lead a struggle to save the Metropolitan Opera, which, after 50 years of glory, will close up unless $300,000 is obtained.

Directors of the opera association announced yesterday it would not renew its lease on the famous old opera house near Times Square unless the $300,000 guaranty fund is raised.

'NEST EGG' GONE

Since the economic recession, a "nest egg" of $1,100,000, built up through the years, has been wiped out, and a guaranty fund of $150,000 contributed for this season by directors and others, is expected to be used up shortly.

A statement by Paul D. Cravath, head of the opera association, said opera "should be supported on a public basis in keeping with the great contribution which it makes to the culture and entertainment of the people generally."

Accordingly, the committee for saving metropolitan opera was formed, with Miss Bori at its head, to raise funds. The committee is composed of the men who have heretofore guided the destinies of the opera house, as well as Lawrence Tibbett and Edward Johnson.

DIRECTORS SCORED

Deems Taylor, composer and author, criticized the directors of the opera company in an address yesterday. He said:

"Up to last year the directors had not contributed one cent since 1910 to the support of opera in New York. Under Gatti-Casazza's magnificent management, the opera had broken even.

"You cannot blame people nowadays for not having money, but you can blame them for having complacently taken bows all these years as generous, illustrious patrons of art and for not admitting that, in fact, they have not been supporting opera at all."

MRS. ROOSEVELT TO DINE 1,575

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—In preparation for starting March 4 her career as mistress of the White House by entertaining 1,575 guests, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt today began to write her menus.

They will be served, buffet style, with bouillon, two kinds of sandwiches—whole wheat bread and cream cheese and white bread and lettuce—fish salad, chicken salad, ice cream, cake and coffee.

For tea there will be 1,000 guests. The menu will include tea and coffee and fruit punch, if it should be a warm day, assorted sandwiches, buttered nut bread, ice cream and cake.

Only relatives will be present for dinner—but there will be 75 of them. The menu consists of oyster stew, scrambled eggs and sausages, creamed chicken, fried potatoes, peas, buttered rolls, celery and olives, various kinds of jelly, charlotte russe and coffee.

GASSED TWINS, BROTHER SAVED

Dormont, Mt. Lebanon and Mt. Washington police today worked with inhalators over three brothers overcome by carbon monoxide gas, reviving them after nearly three hours.

The victims were Charles Sias, 28, and John and James Sias, 21-year-old twins. They live at 1112 Arkansas avenue, Dormont.

Awakened by the cries of her 7-month-old granddaughter, Luetta Church, Mrs. Anna Sias, mother of the victims, found Charles lying on the floor. He had tried to reach the door. Mrs. Sias threw open a window of the room and called Dormont police.

The Dormont crew started immediately to revive Charles and called Mt. Lebanon and Mt. Washington police, who administered treatment to the twins. Employes of the Duquesne Light Company and the Equitable Gas Company also responded to the call, bringing extra tanks of oxygen and more equipment.

MILLION DOLLAR FIRE IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—Fantastic ice covered ruins from which clouds of smoke and steam still drifted skyward today marked the spot were 300 firemen fought a million dollar grain fire throughout the night.

An explosion followed by a burst of flames late yesterday set off the conflagration in an elevator owned by the Rosenbaum Grain Corporation on historic Goose Island, northwest of the Loop.

The fact that it occurred on the coldest day in 34 years of weather history in Chicago—when the thermometer sank to 19 degrees below zero—didn't make the task of the 80 fire-fighting companies any easier, as water from their hose fell in sheets of ice and coated the seven-story structure.

So far as could be learned, no casualties occurred. While all firemen suffered from cold and exposure one, Robert Callahan, was taken to a hospital with both feet frozen.

BOSTON, Feb. 10.—(INS.)—Twenty firemen were overcome and 40 families were driven from their homes in a freezing temperature today when fire destroyed St. Eulalia's Catholic Church and menaced nearby structures. Loss was estimated at $100,000.

RELIEF GROUPS TAXED BY COLD

Relief agencies in Pittsburgh reported last night that during the day they had provided food for 7,000 homeless men, and redoubled work of providing aid for 46,000 needy families in Allegheny County.

A. W. Grotefend, director of the Central Application Bureau for Homeless Men, 211 Wood street, said there was no need for jobless men to suffer from the cold, as there were ample accommodations for them.

The Helping Hand reported it provided 4,800 meals yesterday and last night, and furnished sleeping quarters for 2,000 men. The Improvement of the Poor gave food to between 1,300 and 1,400, and quartered them for the night.

Applications for coal indicated an increase in the needs of 36,000 families, the Family Welfare Association reported. Four hundred new applications for aid were received during the day, Miss Eleanor Hanson said.

Samuel F. Casey, director of the Allegheny County Emergency Association, said his agency was ready to furnish coal on short notice.

The Salvation Army and Volunteers of America both reported an increase in calls for aid.

ALOHA'S RECALL TO STAND SEEN

LONG BEACH, Cal., Feb. 10.—(AP.)—A possible reappearance on the witness stand of blonde young Aloha Wanderwell, to tell of a mysteriously missing pistol, was awaited today in the trial of William J. Guy, Welsh adventurer, accused of slaying her husband, "Captain" Walter Wanderwell, on board the yacht Carma last December 5.

If she is called, it will be by the defense. The state, for which she was a major witness, rested yesterday.

Officers never found the pistol with which Wanderwell was shot to death almost on the eve of a world cruise with 15 young men and women signed as a "crew" on an expense-sharing basis.

BROTHER DEAD, PERSHING ILL

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—Illness appeared likely today to prevent Gen. John J. Pershing from attending the funeral of his brother, James F. Pershing, 70, who died in a hospital last night of a heart ailment.

The General was in Midland, Tex., where he was suffering a severe cold. A sister, Miss May Pershing, was en route to New York.

James F. Pershing was 16 months younger than his brother. Born in Laclede, Mo., he entered the construction field as a youth and supervised in Texas the building of the Texas and Pacific Railroad. Later he was in the clothing manufacturing business in Chicago.

In more recent years, he had an insurance selling office in Jersey City, N. J., and an apartment in New York. Surviving are his widow, the former Jessie E. Jackson, of Detroit, and two sons.

all such loans as rapidly as can be done safely.

Property on which you CANNOT BORROW drops in value when you want to sell it.

Farmers have had a hard time. But that is not the fault of individuals from whom they have borrowed money, assuming that they have paid a fair rate of interest.

IT HAS always been difficult to borrow on churches or theaters, because the lender would not want to foreclose on a church, and because lenders do not understand theaters. Farmers will make a mistake if they cause their properties to be classified as "something on which nothing can be borrowed."

A BILL in the Massachusetts Legislature makes it necessary for non-residents to buy a permit "before they may dig Massachusetts worms for fishing."

Calvin Coolidge, who fished with worms, would, if present, have something to say about that. Non-residents will be puzzled by the worm-digging rule, wondering whether it is intended to protect Massachusetts citizens that dig worms as a profession and sell them to strangers, or to protect the worms from extermination.

It is a new idea in taxation.

MAIL ROBBERY NETS BANDITS $325,000

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Feb. 10.—(AP.)—Three men drove up behind the main postoffice, surprised two postal employes, snatched a pouch and were at large today with cash and bonds estimated to total $325,000 in value. The license number of their car was obtained by the victims of last night's raid—W. E. Williams, clerk-guard, and Claus Swanson, truck driver. Williams' pistol also was taken.

Pedestrians and motorists passing the office at the time of the holdup were unaware the routine had been interrupted. Police and postal inspectors, joining in an intensive search, were depending on finding clues through discovery of the bandits' auto.

ROBBERY WELL TIMED

The robbery was so well timed, Postmaster Harold McCurry said, the men stopped Williams just as he emerged from the mail room with the valuable pouch. But McCurry said the robbers missed a much larger delivery of cash and bonds sent out earlier.

Williams said he saw a man standing before him, wearing a handkerchief mask and carrying a pistol. Williams thought a relief truck driver was playing a "crude joke" on him because the man wore clothes similar to one of the postoffice workers.

The man grabbed Williams' pistol from its holster, snatched the pouch from his hand and jumped from the platform to the alley, where a second bandit stood.

Meanwhile the third bandit covered Swanson, who stood at the end of the platform. Swanson said he did not realize at first what was happening.

ONE SHOT FIRED

As the men ran for their car one fired a shot. The bullet went in the general direction of his companions and one of them shouted:

"Cut that out; we don't want any of that stuff."

HUNT FOR 'LOST' FLIER FUTILE

ROCKWOOD, Pa., Feb. 10.—(AP.)—Reports that an aviator had parachuted to earth as his plane crashed at dusk yesterday, were discounted by local officers today following a search in the woodlands of Negro Mountain, southeast of Rockwood.

Albert Berkebile, a school teacher, and Floyd Miller, a friend, reported they saw a "chute" floating earthward and later heard a loud report—"a noise that sounded like a crashing plane."

They were unable to locate either aviator or plane and notified police.

A check of Western Pennsylvania airports failed to reveal any aviator missing. Larry Semans, of Uniontown, Pennsylvania national Guardsman, at first was reported missing, but Burgess Field,

ADMITS 'LOVE' MURDER IN MINE

WILKES-BARRE, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—An alleged love-triangle murder in the dark depths of a coal mine, with dynamite the weapon, has resulted in a man and a woman being held in prison today to await grand jury action.

Joseph Wisniewski, 29, of Exeter and Shickshinny, and Mrs. Susan Shedlock, 27, of Exeter, are held on the basis of the man's plea of guilty and his tale of being urged by the woman to kill her husband, Andrew.

Mrs. Shedlock pleaded not guilty as they were arraigned before Alderman Frank Brown, of Wilkes-Barre.

Wisniewski, laborer for the woman's husband in the Dial Rock Coal Company mine at West Wyoming, testified he set off a dynamite charge which loosened rock, killing Shedlock last November 25.

WOMEN BATTLE OVER POLITICS

ERIE, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—Two factions ruled the Erie County Democratic Women's Council today after a stormy session which ended in a near riot last night. Fists flew and a hairpulling match resulted after Mrs. James F. Lavery, wife of the county Democratic chairman, arrived at the meeting with 50 followers to elect a slate of officers opposed to Mrs. Therese Sulesky, president of the organization, who had 25 supporters present.

Mrs. Sulesky adjourned the meeting after rollcall, charging Mrs. Lavery had "loaded" the meeting with ineligible members.

Boos and cries of "You're yellow" marked the announcement and the Lavery faction proceeded with the election.

REVOLT LOOMS IN CUBA UNDER MENOCAL, JR

International News Service.

TAMPA, Fla., Feb. 10.—Heading a new revolutionary movement against the government of President Machado, of Cuba, Mario Menocal, jr., 26-year-old adventurous son of the former president of Cuba, was believed to be somewhere in the island republic today after a flight by plane from Miami, Fla., according to reports from high sources here.

Young Menocal hopped off from Miami last night in his private plane, ostensibly for a short flight. He left without clearance papers.

Sources here reported his destination was Santa Clara, concentration point of a new revolutionary movement that will thrust within the next few days at Havana, the capital.

AMERICANS' AID HINTED

Santa Clara is near the western tip of Cuba. The fiery young revolutionary leader who aided his father in an unsuccessful effort to overthrow the Machado government in 1931 was understood to have a rendezvous there with his brother, Raoul, two or three years his junior.

Reports said more than 10,000 troops were concentrated in and about Santa Clara, well armed and well equipped, with officers said to include American and German World War veterans.

The main thrust against the Cuban capital is expected to take place within 10 days, reports said.

Former President Mario Menocal, Sr., is in Miami, where today he scoffed at reports of a revolt. He had headed a group of Cuban political refugees concentrated there since their exile from Cuba following failure of the 1931 revolution.

MENOCAL TO SHUN CHAIR

Menocal, according to reported plans of the revolutionists, will make no effort to take over the reins of government in the event the coup is successful.

Col. Carlos Menedetta, one of Menocal's leaders, is being groomed for the post, but Menocal will be the power behind the presidential chair. Menedetta is now a refugee in the Mexican legation in Havana. He was active in the 1931 revolt and was among those captured with Menocal and his two spirited sons.

COL. LINDSAY HONORED

Col. David Lindsay, of the G. A. R., was honored at the annual Lincoln birthday meeting of the Pine Creek Valley Post of the American Legion of Allison Park last night. Spanish-American War veterans of Shaler, Hampton and Richland townships, as well as World War veterans attended.

Despite his advanced years, Col. Lindsay braved the zero weather to spend the evening with the younger veterans. George Phillips and Raymond Eastley, who, with Col. Lindsay, are the sole survivors of more than 700 men from the district who served in the Civil War, were unable to attend.

Judge Ralph H. Smith, the principal speaker, paid tribute to the Civil War veterans and cautioned the younger veterans against indifferences and carelessness in exercising the privileges of citizenship.

COUNTY BOARDS CONTROL AID PURCHASES

HARRISBURG, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—The State Emergency Relief Board announced today that managers of community markets will buy the food and other items under the supervision of local county relief boards.

The state board said it will act merely in an advisory capacity and will "furnish information to the county boards that will enable them to buy at the low dollar. The board does not propose, nor will it undertake in the future, to buy any of the commodities issued by the community markets."

The state board's statement said one of the basic principles of the community market system "is the purchase of foodstuffs at wholesale from local dealers." It added:

"While it will not always be advantageous to county boards to buy commodities from local wholesalers and producers, the state board will insist that the principle be adhered to as far as possible."

SHANNON HINTS ANTI-BLUE O. K.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—Lieut. Gov. Edward C. Shannon today predicted the bill to modify the Sunday blue law will be reported favorably to the Senate.

The bill, which was passed by the House last Tuesday, is now in the hands of the Senate Law and Order Committee. Senator Joseph C. Trainer, of Philadelphia, chairman of the committee, has announced a public hearing on the measure for next Tuesday. Shannon said:

"I think the majority of the Senators are in favor of bringing the Sunday sports bill to the floor."

He made this comment in an address to the B'Nai B'Rith Luncheon Club, which was attended by Richard J. Beamish, secretary of the commonwealth, and others high in state affairs.

Mrs. Olive Ulrick, mother of Ulva Ulrick, killed in the accident, was awarded $3,500; Marietta Deisch, $4,000, and May E. Steiner, $1,800. The three women are from Galion, O., near where the accident occurred. Carr operated a motor truck service downtown.

Garat's Bride Fears 'Vamps' Of Hollywood

MRS. HENRI GARAT

Cites Chevalier Case On Way West With New French Star

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—(INS.)—Betty, the English bride of Henri Garat, French stage and screen star, is frankly afraid of the Hollywood vamping situation.

Garat (pronounced Ga-Rah) and Mrs. Garat set out for the film capital where he will begin his American film career as the leading man for Janet Gaynor in her new picture "Adorable." The bride said:

"Everybody has warned me against the beautiful women in Hollywood and I am naturally tremulous. Are they so beautiful?"

Betty is quite a beauty herself and only weighs 54 kilograms (118 pounds in American scaleage).

She was reminded that for Hollywood business reasons it was sometimes necessary for a newly-arrived star to be put in circulation. She said:

"They must remember he belongs only to me.

"Look what happened to Maurice Chevalier and his wife, Yvonne Vallee. They were divorced—after seven years."

STATE 'JUNKET' OPPOSED

HARRISBURG, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—Even if Gov. Pinchot and a majority of the House of Representatives favor a "junket" to the Roosevelt inaugural, Representative Hiram G. Andrews, Cambria, declares he still is against it.

Representative Joseph G. Steedle (Rep.), Allegheny, announced yesterday that Gov. Pinchot has sanctioned a bill appropriating $2,500 to transport the Governor, his cabinet and legislators to Washington March 4.

Hearing of this, Andrews issued a statement at Johnstown declaring "if it is humanly possible, a number of members of the House—new and old—who believe as I do, will try to force a record vote."

SCHOOL SAVING ROW IN HOUSE

HARRISBURG, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—The storm over the administration's new school code is temporarily localized in the House Education Committee.

There the code is held for a public hearing February 21. Meanwhile the 41 members of the committee will review its much-discussed provisions while a subcommittee performs that task for the Senate Education Committee.

Both supporters and opponents of the controversial features of the code—elimination of small districts, fewer state teachers' colleges and revised distribution of state aid to local districts—incline to the belief that the Senate will leave to the House the job of initiating action on the code.

Coal Rates Slashed To 'Niagara Frontier'

The Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday issued an order authorizing three railroads to reduce rates on bituminous coal from the Reynoldsville and Pittsburgh districts to the so-called Niagara Frontier district in New York without observing the long and short haul provisions of the Interstate Commerce act. This order is regarded as another rate victory by the coal producers of this district.

U. S. LAUNCHES LINDY PLOT INQUIRY

federal authorities during the day. In that event an immediate hearing before Commissioner Charles Fox, Jr., was expected. Upon release of the prisoners to the federal authorities the latter were prepared to issue a warrant charging the men with "mailing threatening communications" under Title 18, Section 338A of the United States Code.

Except to deny vigorously any connection with the alleged plot the two men have kept a guarded silence.

The arrests were made yesterday when Bryant called at a bank to cash a $17,000 check, which had been left by a police officer in a hollow stump. As he left the bank with a dummy package, which he thought contained "big bills," Bryant was met by Harvey outside the building.

Both ran when police approached and Harvey attempted to get into an automobile in which his wife and a child sat.

After lodging the men in jail and the woman in the detention house, police told of the extortion attempt which was carried on through a series of letters addressed to Col. Lindbergh and to Chief of Detectives Robert C. Johnson, of Roanoke. The latter masqueraded as a representative of Col. Lindbergh.

STUMP POSTOFFICE

The exchange of notes between the extortionists and Johnson was conducted by means of a stump postoffice which was designed for the purpose in the first of the letters sent Col. Lindbergh. This and a subsequent letter, both of which were placed in the hands of Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, of New Jersey police, were forwarded to Roanoke authorities.

Schwarzkopf, who compared the letters with the ransom note left by the kidnapers and slayers of the first Lindbergh baby, said the handwriting apparently was not the same.

Copies of the two letters follow:

Colonel Lindbergh:

"Sir i am sorry that i cant write English good but i hope that you have read my other letter. i told you that i wanted money to go away from the usa my home is across the ocean and i must have (50,000) fifty thousand or i will get your baby. Dont that we can get it for we can and will if it takes years. i am sorry that you paid your money to the rong man when i know that he did not get your baby and if you not published it your baby would have ben with you today but you broadcast and it was in all the papers. He died of new monia.

"We have no warm place to stay now i do not want this little baby we want the money and it will cheaper to pay us the $50,000 your child is worth that you. We will leave this country and you can have your child always and no more worry about it. i am in a little town to day call Roanoke, Va. i live in a big city but i come to Roanoke Va sometimes. You can 2 thousand in 500 bills in 10.00 5 in 20.00 10 thousand in 50.00 bills 30 in 100.00 and i must put in a box so it will be safe i do not yet what time i will get to the place where i want you yourself to put the money. It is that you go down to Roanoke Va and then go to Rosewood ave. This is in the out edge of town call Grand Ct.

"You go up this road or ave. it is call it is crooked and goes up a hill there is a street car and a bus that will take you to Rosewood ave. Then go up this ave till you come to a clean looking log close to the side of the road left side then cross the road is a big white pine tree about 30 feet hi close to it is a rotten stump. You put the money in this stump and cover with trash and leave. This is close at the back of the white house and garage. Be not later than January 5th. i hope you know enough not to publish this. Whin you come do make up so no one will know you. i hope you understand i mean to do what i say."

WARNS AGAINST POLICE

The second note read:

"Notice Roanoke Va.

"i hope you will now enough not to publish or to try to put the cops if so i will sure do my job and you will forever be sorry. We hate this country and is enough of us to do you and yours and we will unless you put fifty thousand dollars at the place we have told you. Rosewood ave or road grand ct. in a stump close to white pine tree on the right side of the road and not later than January 3, 1933 and put it thar yourself and fix yourself so no one will no you and no cops. if you do this as i ask you to i will promest you that you will never be bothered again and can live in pice the rest of your life and we will leve this place and never come back. The way we want the money.

"Two thousand in 5.00 bills.
"Three do $10.00.
"Five do $20.00.
"Ten do do $50.00.
"Thirty do 100.00.
"Fifty thousand in all. You do not take the numbers for not one will used in this country.

"We want to say farewell to usa sorry my paper is not good but the best i got."

The letters were punctuated poorly and there was a complete lack of capitalization.

POLICE GO-BETWEEN

After the receipt of the letters by Col. Lindbergh, R. C. Johnson, chief of the Identification Bureau of the Roanoke Police Department, attempted to contact the writer of the notes by leaving messages in the stump.

In answer to the first of these letters, Johnson found in the stump a message offering to settle for $25,000 instead of the $50,000 originally asked.

The writer said he had attempted to fix a box in the stump, but had found it to be too large. He said:

"Get a small box. The one I had too big."

He said he was preparing to leave for New York, but would return by January 3.

The note was addressed to "Mr. Jones or Mr. L. (apparently meaning Lindbergh), and was postmarked December 20.

Johnson replied that he was unable to raise the amount asked, but agreed to leave a smaller sum and offered to arrange negotiations for payment of the balance.

REPEATS THREAT

Replying, the would-be extortionist reiterated his demand for $25,000, asserting:

"I need the money and need it bad and there is nothing that I would not do to get it. You must do as I ask you or I will do my work. Don't think that we can't for we can and will. And will be safer and cheaper for you to do what I ask you to do for if we get you or yours the bill will be heavy and it may be years but we will be sure do our work."

Near the end the letter said:

"Now, Mr. John J. Jones, if you are not Mr. Lindbergh himself, you had better get in touch with him. This is my last letter and no publishing and no cops."

The next letter from Johnson, which had a notice on the outside to "innocent finders" to mail it back to the addressee in the event they should stumble upon it, contained a check and the identification marks which were to be placed on the back. Johnson wrote that he hesitated to place the money in the stump because he feared the package might "come into the wrong hands." He said, however, that he had deposited the money in the bank.

Nazis Balk Tribute To Slain Student

BERLIN, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—Police unexpectedly forbade Republican students from holding exercises today on a square before the main hall of Breslau University in commemoration of a student named Steinfeld, who was killed during a clash with Hitlerites.

As the Republican students emerged from the classrooms today they soon found themselves in a fist fight with the Nazis. Police had a half-hour's work separating the combatants.

Your Income Tax

Fire or Theft Loss May Be Deducted.

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

This is the seventeenth of a series of articles analyzing the Revenue Act of 1932 and discussing the problems of income tax payers.

Certain losses of an emergency character may be deducted from income in computing taxes, even though they do not arise from business transactions or affect property used in business.

These deductions include losses from "fires, storms, shipwrecks or other casualty," as well as from theft.

If a taxpayer's home or his automobile is destroyed by fire or his summer bungalow damaged by flood or storm, he may claim deductions for the amount of the loss involved.

Jewelry or automobiles stolen constitute examples of losses which may be deducted. It is necessary, however, to establish the fact that the property actually was stolen. The claim would not be allowed if the circumstances made it uncertain whether the property was stolen or merely lost.

Losses of these types are deductible only from income in the years in which the actual casualties occurred, even though they might not be discovered until the following year.

Where losses are covered by insurance or by recovery of damages in some other form, they cannot be deducted. In the event that the amount of insurance does not cover the entire loss, the excess of the amount over the insurance may be deducted from income.

Patient Hangs Self In Hospital Bath

In a shower bath in St. Francis Hospital, a patient, Robert Harkness, 30, of Versailles, today hanged himself, the Coroner's office reported.

DARROW RESTS CASE FOR BOY

ROCKFORD, Ill., Feb. 10.—(AP.)—Attorney Clarence Darrow rested his case today for Russell McWilliams, 18-year-old Rockford youth, twice convicted of murder.

Darrow, 75-year-old veteran of many startling trials, relied in this trial as in his successful pleas for reversal of two sentences of death, on McWilliams' unprivileged life in boyhood.

In his argument to Judge Shurtleff, who hear the case without a jury, Darrow was expected to indict society in general as the cause of the boy's act.

The state recalled in rebuttal six passengers on the street car where McWilliams killed Conductor William Sayles in 1931. All testified McWilliams was sober.

The youth testified yesterday he had been drinking all day before the robbery and shooting of Sayles.

VETERANS DENY YODER DEAL

Denial that the Allegheny County Veterans of Foreign Wars were connected with any movement to obtain the Yoder Hotel property, Forbes street, near Magee street, today was issued by County Commander Al Yahres.

Publicity had been issued announcing a campaign was planned to raise funds for the purchase of the hotel as a foundation for the County V. F. W.

Commander Yahres said no such project was contemplated by his organization and no person had been authorized to use its name for negotiations for raising of funds.

R. L. McDonald, attorney for the Yoder estate, said while his name had been announced as agreeing to act as treasurer, he had only been approached by a real estate man, had agreed to act in such a capacity but wanted a veterans' committee that would handle the campaign. He had not been approached by any veterans, McDonald said.

'Y' to Broadcast Ideas for Parties

Ideas for banquets, games and stunts at father and son get-togethers will be given by Bill and Alex, of the Downtown Y. M. C. SUNDAY SHOW TO AID BABIES

Harry Kalmine, regional director of the Warner Theaters, announces an unusually attractive program for the Sunday Food-admission show to be given for the benefit of the Jewish Home for Babies and Children next Sunday at the Warner Theater. The feature talking picture "He Learned About Women," with Stuart Erwin and Allison Skipworth, will head the program and there will be newsreels, comedies and short subjects.

Food only will be required as tickets—no money will be accepted. The public is asked to bring foods that children would want and to make their donations compare in value to the box office admission to movies. Canned goods and package groceries can be purchased today at the lowest prices ever known and there is no reason why each person who comes to this benefit should not bring a package with a value of at least 25 cents.

Hundreds of men and women directly interested in this home have agreed to bring food to the value of 50 cents. If others average one-half of this amount, the Sunday benefit show will result in the largest food donation ever known in Pittsburgh. The show will begin at 2:00 o'clock, run until 11 o'clock. Children will not be admitted unless accompanied by parents.

AIRCASTER'S MAGIC LAMP

Stage, Screen and Radio Stars on Air Tonight

HOOVER BROADCASTS

Herman, Genie of Airways, Would Pay Off U. S. Debt By Tax on Old Gags

By AIRCASTER

A greenish haze hovered tenuously about Herman the Genie when he obeyed, somewhat tardily, this morning's summons of the magic lamp.

Lacking such magical insight as the Genie, nevertheless, I had no difficulty in sensing that Herman was suffering from what polite people call a hangover. He confirmed my diagnosis by penitently admitting that he had spent the night on an orgy with fellow phantoms of the air. They included, as I learned, the missing Allen lad, the baron's cousin, Hugo; the kingfish, the fire chief's bucolic uncle and the belligerent brother Crawford. Softly he said:

"So sorry, but I shall make up for my delinquencies. I wish to offer a suggestion.

"Has it ever occurred to you to wish for tax relief — for a means of relieving this burdened nation by diverting some of the levies toward the sinners of radio? I have here a plan for balancing the budget by imposing fines, taxes, penalties, etc., upon those who go about inspiring the flagrancies of broadcasting."

Tax on Old Gags

I instructed him to proceed, and he did:

"I would, then, advise the following:

"A head tax on all sopranos.

"A heavy fine upon all impersonators and imitators.

"A double income tax on all songs in which 'moon' and 'June' occur. Deportation as the alternative.

"Fine and tax on 'Trees.'

"Fine, exile, or both, for all thrillers which frighten little children or stage more than three murders per program."

* * *

More Jobs for Herman

I intervened:

"Before you begin to fade out —and I have noted that you're losing volume, Herman. Take this list of wishes that I've prepared for this week—and try to mak: good on them, willya?

"That one network or the other would give Mildred Bailey a regular spot and not deprive the audience of one of the finest blues voices hereabouts.

"That Peter Dixon and Aileen Berry return to the air.

"That the Three-X Sisters come back.

"That Jack Pearl's studio audience shorten its applause when the Baron says—'Vass you dere, etc.'

Cantor to Leave

Harriet Lee, former radio queen, gets a permanent Thursday night place on the Magic Carpet bill, and so does Anson Weeks and his orchestra.

Claude Morris, of KDKA, has been relieved of his announcing duties to devote his entire time to dramatics and the preparation of continuity.

Globe-Trotting

With the Globe Trotter of the Sun-Telegraph and Hearst Metrotone News

By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN

Hello, ladies and gentlemen:

More questions about old coins, and I have had to dig up a coin expert to answer them. So, coin collectors who have written, be patient. Your answers are coming.

Talking about coins, have you noticed the number of stories in the paper concerning spurious money? Got hold of Assistant United States Attorney Raymond Evans for some information concerning bad money. He tells me that his next radio talk on WJAS, Friday at 6:30, will give suggestions as to ways and means to detect the illegal coins. The globe trotters, he says, can be of invaluable assistance to the government in running down these bogus money artists.

Laurence Erb—Your treatise on taxation has been turned over to the editor. He likes it.

That newsie who befriended a dog downtown one cold morning will be rewarded by an appreciative onlooker. He doesn't know it yet.

Heard from Tommy Quinn, Braddock's American Legion commander, this morning. Sent me a picture of Carnegie's birthplace he brought back from Scotland—not the birthplace, the picture. He recalls that while visiting No. 2 Moody street, Dumferline, he rested in the bed in which Andrew Carengie was ushered into this world.

What another? This time the Globe-Trotter has been accused of saying, "Avoid catching cold by keeping your feet wet." Just mankind's little helper, that's all.

Next time you come down Bigelow Boulevard notice how the new postoffice is taking form. Today the windows proclaim the ownership. They bear the marking, "U. S."

Broadcast by Pope May Be Heard Here

If atmospheric conditions permit, WCAE and WJAS listeners will hear a rebroadcast of a conversation between Pope Pius XI and Senatore Guglielmo Marconi when the new Vatican City ultra-short wave transmitter is opened tomorrow at 10:30 a. m.

COUNTY FARM VALUE SET AT $53,000,000

Valuation of Allegheny County farms last year was estimated at approximately $53,000,000, exclusive of livestock and personal property, it was revealed yesterday at the annual meeting of the Allegheny County Agricultural Extension Association.

R. K. McEwen was re-elected president at the session held in the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce rooms. Other officers named were C. W. Speer, vice-president; Robert A. Powers, secretary; Albert B. Craig, treasurer; Charles P. Shenot, Wexford; Walter Bock, Carnegie; Frank McKinney, Elizabeth; C. I. King, Imperial, and G. E. Wilson, Tarentum, directors; home economics representatives, Mrs. Harry T. Magill, Tarentum; Mrs. John Haudenshield, Crafton, and Mrs. William H. Scott, McKees Rocks.

Review of the progress of agriculture in the county was given by William V. Dennis, rural sociology expert of State College. Citing the rural population as 16,330, Dennis said it composed over 3,200 families with only 25.8 per cent foreign born. Advantages of farm life during the economic depression were stressed in the comparison that while there were 2,604 sheriff sales in the county last year, only about 13 farms were sold. Land and building valuations in 1930 were estimated at $47,786,312; implements and machinery, $3,036,907, and passenger cars, $1,936,000.

The association's director, Henry R. Eby, reported the largest number of inquiries during 11 years were received last year. Thrift gardens and present conditions were believed responsible. Miss Lottie B. Hartt, the home economics director, cited canning was among the most active subjects. A talk on nutrition was given by Miss Grace Bacon, State College expert.

The Twentieth Century Club yesterday afternoon presented in its music course two outstanding Pittsburgh talents in an effective program, doubtless enjoyed by the entire audience — Marjery Selkovits, pianist, and Samuel di Primio, tenor.

Mr. Lissfelt

Miss Selkovitz left the classics aside, and gave a brilliant group of Chopin and some effective modern music. She has a joyous style for her Chopin, but confuses volume of sound with elan which I miss entirely in her interpretation. Her Debussy and Ravel are quite another thing, for both rhythmically and tonally she works wisely with these two Frenchmen.

For the first time I have listened to DeFalla's Fire Dance when it sounded like music, both as to form and nuance of sound. The "Reflets dans L' Eau," an encore, was excellent piano playing.

Di Primio's voice is a treasure. It is in every respect the Italian grand opera tenor robusto. My opinion of his music since last hearing has not changed. He should retire for several years to perfect his technique, and should he prove the student in those years, he will emerge a phenomenal singer.

Miss Hulda Lefridge played accompaniments.

Le Prophete

Hulda Lefridge presented Helen Hanau, pianist, and Carolyn Hunt Mahaffey, contralto, at the Morning Musicale in Hotel Schenley yesterday. A constantly growing audience is coming to these concerts and surely everyone must notice that the music played and sung is consistently on a higher level than the trivial songs especially, which more renowned artists offer us.

Mrs. Mahaffey has appeared during this season, but in every respect her singing yesterday morning was improved. I was especially interested to hear her "Lorelei" in English, also one of the Wolf songs, "The Mouse Trap," which was surprisingly effective in translation, although Wolf did conceive some rather characteristic effects which are impossible in English.

Helen Hanau is a resident of Washington, Pa., a town which has given us many good musicians. Miss Hanau is no exception to that tradition and comes to us by way of Berlin and Vienna. From Bach and Schumann to Debussy and Ravel she proves herself a very musical person, and most successful in Schumann, where she strikes a nice medium between his childish charm and his matured romanticism.

There is feminine grace in all she plays and in her moderns an originality that prove her a student. In certain registers of the keyboard she creates a timbre that is most enticing, and now we should like to hear this talented young lady do works on a grander scale.

PRIEST PRAISES RELIEF AIDES

Father Cox made his first appearance on the air yesterday over Station WJAS after an absence of more than a month and following his broadcast he was deluged with telephone calls and telegrams congratulating him on getting home from the hospital.

Father Cox thanked the many who had been loyal to him through his illness, the many who had come to his aid in helping the needy when their assistance was most required. He told of the urgency for help among the destitute that now prevails on account of zero weather. He thanked the Sun-Telegraph for the aid this newspaper is giving him every day—in fact he said that his work could not have continued without this newspaper.

In the meantime, Father Cox, while still directing the unemployment relief activities at Old St. Patrick's, must go slow. While in the hospital he lost nearly 20 pounds and is now on a strict diet by orders of Dr. Gilbert Meyers.

The Father Cox-Sun-Telegraph subscription drive still goes on. For every subscription that comes in on the blank on this page, the Father Cox Unemployment Relief Fund gets a liberal cash commission. The fund has already received more than $800 on account of this drive and the daily articles in this newspaper have brought the "father of the jobless" hundreds of other donations in money, food and clothing. The Sun-Telegraph is sending Father Cox another liberal check today.

TEACHER IS TAUGHT

How to Stop Cough FAST

"It was parents' day and I had a terrible cough. One of the mothers who called on me noticed how I suffered. 'Why don't you take some Smith Brothers' Cough Syrup,' she said. 'It stopped Annie's cough right away.' Well—why shouldn't a teacher take lessons? I sent right out for a bottle of Smith Brothers' Syrup and after the first swallow my head cleared, my throat felt better. In a few hours the cough had disappeared." 'FIFI'S' MOTHER WRITES OF OLD N.Y. '400'

Great names and events become everyday things, with princes and a First Lady of the Land proving themselves "just folks," in the intimate pen pictures by Cora Brown Potter, famous belle of society and mother of "Fifi" Potter Stillman McCormick, appearing in the March issue of Cosmopolitan, out today, under the title of "The Age of Innocence and I."

Her memoirs cover a period from the Civil War days in the Old South, including the days when "Society was a world" and New York's 400 marveled at her beauty, and culminating in a dramatic career in England.

CLEVELAND'S "FIRST LADY"

President Cleveland's sister was First Lady when Mrs. Potter chanced to visit Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Whitney in Washington. Mr. Whitney was then Secretary of the Navy. It was arranged for Mrs. Potter to give a reading. Secretary Whitney asked her to recite, "Ostler Joe."

Mrs. Potter describes the event:

"So that night to a crowded drawing-room in the beautiful Whitney home I recited the poem. Miss Cleveland was sitting directly in front of me. She seemed so petrified that I thought I was making a great impression on her. The poem was intense, and at the end, there was a great silence.

"Miss Cleveland rose from her chair. To the consternation of everyone present she asked for her carriage, saying to Mrs. Whitney, as I and all present heard: 'I have never been so shocked in my life.' Still more amazing to relate, everyone left the drawing room, followed her out in silence, and went home. Mr. Whitney said nothing, except that he was going to bed, and disappeared."

NEW YORK IMPRESSIONS

The writer jots down her impression of New York:

"The New York of that day was the city pictured by Mrs. Wharton in her 'Age of Innocence.' Society was ruled by Mrs. John Jacob Astor.

"The ladies of the famous 'Four Hundred' drove in their victorias up and down Fifth avenue, exchanging bows and smiles. In the evening the brownstone houses were lighted with gas lights for long, ceremonious dinners, followed by receptions, musicales and balls. Everyone was related to, or knew, everyone else."

Hungry Club Sets City Manager Talk

Daniel E. Morgan, former City Manager of Cleveland, will speak before the Hungry Club public forum Monday in the Fort Pitt Hotel. The subject of his address will be, "Cleveland and the City Manager Plan."

Morgan also will address the monthly meeting of the Brookline Board of Trade in the Brookline School, Pioneer avenue, Monday evening. Wm. J. Blakeley, president of the Brookline Board, has invited citizens of the Brookline-South Hills district to attend.

'Y' Coach Speaks On Health Service

Robert B. McKinley, assistant United States Attorney and coach of the swimming team of the downtown Y. M. C. A., spoke last night on health service during a "Pittsburgh Today" program from radio station KQV. He emphasized the importance of a man's health to himself, his family and his community, and advised membership in the "Y."

Foxes Have Handicap On Oregon Sleuths

PORTLAND, Ore., Feb. 10.—(AP.)—Fox hunting was indulged in by deputy sheriffs here, but there were no hounds, no blare of horns, not even a horse.

But L. N. Sandman complained two foxes had stolen 56 chickens and two ducks. Two deputies set out in hot pursuit, which at last report was not so hot.

Here's Cipher That's Real 'Sticker'

By KENNETH A. NAGEL
Cipher Editor.

Here is a new cipher. It's No. 56, submitted by William H. Traynor, of Avalon. This is going to cause everyone a little grief before it is completed. It surely is a sticker.

"Bogie" on this one is three and a half hours. If you do it in less you can pat yourself on the back. Now go to work as you will have to use all the time you can spare.

Watch tomorrow's Sun-Telegraph for a tip that will help. If you solve it in record time, write the Cipher Editor.

You had no trouble on Cipher No. 55 did you? Your boy or girl should have solved that one in no time. Here's how it was done. Let "A" represent 48 and "Z" 23. When you have all the letters written out read the message backwards.

There's a matter of unfinished business today—codes submitted without answers. The Cipher Editor has quite a pile of them, but he's finding his duties much too heavy for him to decode original ciphers. Solutions to their messages should be sent by many, including Russell E. Davis, J. Shipan and others. When sending in your solutions, please repeat your original code.

Business Suit Permissible for Inaugural Ball

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—Thousands of letters are being received by Mrs. John Allan Dougherty, chairman of the inaugural ball, from people in all parts of the country, asking a definition of formal and informal dress.

Mostly the letters come from women who want to make sure their husbands are properly attired in full evening dress, if that is the definition of formal dress, or in tuxedo, if the occasion is "informal."

The queries are an outgrowth of the inaugural ball, to be staged in the Washington auditorium on the night Franklin D. Roosevelt is inducted into the highest office in the land.

Mrs. Dougherty, besieged with so many letters, has called upon the Junior League to answer them. To the first query, "What is formal dress?" the girls give this answer to men: The long-tailed coat, stiff bosom shirt, pearl buttons, piccadilly collar white tie and waistcoat, stripes down trouser legs, black silk sox and patent leather pumps.

As for women, formal evening dress has a wider latitude. Individual taste enters largely into the choice of gown—so that the Junior League dismisses this with the cursory remark, "Let your conscience be your guide."

Informal dress for men runs largely to the tuxedo.

The black tie and black waistcoat are proper with the tuxedo, though to give a dash of more formality the white waistcoat is also in style, but never a white tie.

Boon of all boons, Mrs. Dougherty announces that even the business suit will be permissible, since so many men are coming to Washington, with their wives, to spend only one day, forced to leave for home at night.

The inaugural ball, on the night of March 4, will present one of the most glorious spectacles ever staged in the nation's capital—with diplomats, high ranking government officials, and all the splendor of the various services—admirals and generals in uniform, cabinet officials in full evening dress, others in tuxedos, and the business man in every day garb.

Dinner Given in Honor Of Rocco A. Navarros

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel F. Catanzaro, of Walnut street, McKeesport, entertained Sunday evening at a dinner in the Elks' Club, honoring their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Rocco A. Navarro, of Pittsburgh, whose marriage was solemnized October 7, and just recently announced.

Covers were laid for 20 guests and the table, centered with talisman roses, sweet peas and freesia, was lighted by pink tapers in crystal candelabra.

The guest of honor, Mrs. Navarro, wore black matelasse with white organdie frilled sleeves and a corsage of sweet peas. Her mother chose green velvet with Alencon lace and a corsage of orchids, and the bridegroom's mother wore black rough crepe and gardenias.

This week there was a bridge tea in the Keystone Athletic Club honoring Mr. and Mrs. Navarro, given by Mrs. D. Navarro.

LOW AND NATURAL WAISTLINE COMBINED IN NEW SMART SUIT

DRESSMAKERS cannot, apparently, come to any decision about the lowered waistline, in preference to the natural one. Or, perhaps, they have come to a decision—which is to accept both, rather than keeping to one and eliminating entirely the other.

THOSE DESIGNERS who have been making use of the lowered waistline all seem to agree upon the fact that for some costumes the lower line is more distinguished, but on others the natural waist is more becoming to the average woman.

ONE OF the cleverest ways of using the new waistline is demonstrated in the afternoon suit in today's sketch. Here the designer makes use of the lower line for the jacket,—but leaves the dress with a natural waistline.

THE MARKING of the waistline is especially important in this type of jacket. With its full sleeves, its widened fur-trimmed forearms, a coat of this type finishing at the natural waistline, or belted there, would lose much of its dignified character.

BOTH DRESS and jacket are in beige, fashioned of a lightweight woolen material. Both—aside from the sleeve elaboration—have been kept extremely simple in line.

* * *

THE CARACUL on the jacket is in a beige matching the fabric, and the lines of angular decoration on the dress are brought out by tiny paillettes of fabric beaded with gold.

A World's Record

MORE than three thousand births without a single loss of either mother or child! That is the official Piatt County record of Dr. W. B. Caldwell, in fifty years' family practise in Illinois.

No wonder mothers have such entire confidence in giving little ones Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin!

If you have a baby, you have constant need of this wonderful preparation of pure pepsin, active senna, and fresh herbs. A child who gets this gentle stimulant for the stomach, liver and bowels is always healthier. It keeps children's delicate systems from clogging. It will overcome the most stubborn condition of constipation. It builds them up, and is nothing like the strong cathartics that sap their strength and energy.

A coated tongue or bad breath is the signal for a spoonful of Syrup Pepsin. Children take it readily, for it is really delicious in flavor. Taste it! Take Syrup Pepsin yourself, when sluggish or bilious, or you are troubled with sick headaches and no appetite. Take some for several days when run-down, and see how it picks you up.

It is a prescription preparation which every drug store has ready; in big bottles, just ask anywhere for Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

Portrait of a Man Talking to Himself

Can't recall ever publishing anything before that caused so many letters or made so many men and women weep a little—as did James Carroll's poem here not so long ago . . . In which he told of his baby daughter whom he had never seen . . . Many of the subscribers were puzzled they said . . . Did Mr. Carroll and his wife part before the child arrived—and did she wed another and move to another city? . . . So many fathers and mothers were deeply touched by his despair—but what interested me most was the fact that Mr. Carroll had never jotted down a verse before . . . And "Robin" had everything—rhythm, meter, grace and a contagious lilt that "got you" . . . Now comes M. Marrett with a sequel. Mr. Marrett rejoices because he has been blessed with a little girl and he plays "horsie" with her and "fate has been grand—makes a feller feel grand"—he says . . . Marrett asserts he is supremely happy about her—and I am happy for him, too . . . He will giggle and titter and laugh out loud as his little Carol grows up—I mean when he sees her try to juggle her spoon—when she attempts to eat without any help . . . Nothing is so cute or comical as seeing a little one, with the fist gripped tightly about a spoon—and missing the tiny mouth . . . Bugs Baer, himself a parent, once wrote about watching his little daughter fling spinach all over her face trying to find her lips . . . It was an accurate account—and June and I howled as we read it over and over again.

Those Murray Korman likenesses of the Broadway Battalion in Dave's are clever . . . I like Jim Niles' crack—that if the Kate Smith jokes were laid end to end they'd reach around her waist! . . . Of all the crazy stories this one is a laugh-provoker . . . A doctor had a patient, a nut, who was being taken to Bellevue's observation ward . . . After the dippy one's hands were tied tight, the doc put him in the back of his car . . . Stopping for a red light, a cop looked in, and seeing the tied up fellow, began to investigate . . . The doctor hurriedly explained matters but the cop, who thought someone was being "taken for a ride," said: "Oh, is that so?" and pulled his gun to cover the doctor. "I tell you I'm a doctor," moaned the physician, "and this patient is crazy!" . . . Whereupon the patient leaned out and cooed: "Officer! Kiss me!" . . . The policeman, completely unnerved, waved them on without a word . . . Elinson is good today. He offers a tip to the girls on how to wear those hats that look like pancakes . . . The most effective way to wear them, says Isadore, is to have the hat thrown from a fifth story window and just let it land on the head.

Strange the way Barry and Fitzgibbons were divorced . . . They were among my favorite terpsicorkers . . . And she is so beautiful . . . They had been married happily enough for over three years—and the spark began to fade when they danced here in a smart spot, where a money-honey made goo-goo eyes at her—while her husband swung her shapely form about the floor . . . One day his wife "sold him the idea" that astrology was a mighty fine thing to take up. He agreed—to please her—and the astrologer kept telling him: "Your wife is holding you down—get rid of her—divorce her—leave her. Your big success is without her!" Fitzgibbons began to think things . . . Finally he confronted his frau . . . "Is there someone? Let's have it out now" . . . She said there was—and the divorce was arranged quickly . . . Now she is getting plump in luxury up at Buzzard's Bay—as the wife of young Garland—whose brother won frong pace renown when he snubbed his wealth to be the leader of a nude cult—which was kidded out of existence by the newspapers . . . Wonder if she will miss the long and lusty applause that used to greet her when she danced to the "St. Louis Blues"—or if she ever has them?

Seems to me that too many shops are hiring girls from well-to-do tribes instead of girls who need jobs . . . They are "career-seekers" these college-bred gals, and they might contribute handsomely to the situation by serving in fields without wages—and make more room for daughters who are leaned on by their parents for an extra dollar or so . . . Interesting—about John Barrymore, who was married to "Michael" Strange . . . They had some sort of a tiff, and as they prepared to retire (both were in pajamas) he began chasing her . . . She ran from the apartment down several flights and took refuge in a neighbor's place . . . Barrymore, incensed, broke open the elevator door and slid down the cables with a knife between his teeth! . . . And they tell you that the play, "The Royal Family," was a caricature!

Lovely Film In Fulton

By MARY SHINE

From the old Belasco play, "Madame Butterfly," a film has been made, that retains all of the poignant loveliness of the original, to its tragic ending, and it made its appearance on the Fulton screen yesterday.

As you may know, it is a story of the undying love of a beautiful Japanese maiden, Cho Cho San, for her American naval officer husband. When he leaves her to sail away, promising to return "when the robins nest again," Butterfly waits gaily at first, then sadly, when spring after spring passes and he still does not come. When finally he sees her again, to tell her of his marriage to an American girl, Butterfly sends him away without telling him about their baby son.

Kneeling before the altar saying a prayer to the gods of her ancesters, she remembers the suicidal sword, whereby "He dies with honor, who can no longer live with honor" and so, follows the tradition of her people.

Sylvia Sidney gives Cho Cho San a sympathetic interpretation. Cary Grant is the careless Lieutenant, and there are a number of lovely photographic effects.

ETHEL BARRYMORE PLAYS THE CZARINA IN "RASPUTIN AND THE EMPRESS"

Plays and Players -:- By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

A telegram signed "Jimmy Durante" was delivered to this department yesterday. It follows:

"If you like 'What! No Beer?' thanks for the writeup. If you think otherwise, just dismiss me from your mind. Remember me to Joe down the corner. Planning to stop in Pittsburgh on way back from New York."

All right, Joe, just consider yourself remembered by Schnozzle. The writeup reference is to the latest Buster Keaton-Jimmy Durante comedy, not yet shown here.

There will be no admission charge, but a collection will be taken for Dormont local relief. "The Magistrate" is one of the best of the Pinero plays. The second performance will be the sixtieth by this group in four years.

William J. Hatton (Bill to us), inspired by a recent reference of O. O. McIntyre to A. Toxin Worm summing up Broadway as "fun, a wheelchair and a benefit," recalls the time Mr. Worm (I believe the spelling is Wurm, Bill) was drama critic of the old Dispatch. It was his wont, according to the information, to dine gaily once a week at the old Monongahela House, with champagne 'nevery-thing, forgiving himself with the remark:

"I'll be eating bean soup the rest of the week, but today I live like a king."

Gable Raised To Stellar Rank

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 10. Stardom at last for Clark Gable! The tall young actor who created a vogue for "Treat 'Em Rough" heroes, will reach the screen's highest goal in "The Harbor," his next picture but one at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

It will be as a young doctor in a hospital melodrama that Clark achieves the recognition he used to long for so eagerly in his days as a motion picture extra.

Experienced now and successful, he takes a soberer view of the promotion, but the studio thinks it has the right to introduce him among the chosen few.

Mr. Gable

"The Harbor" is an unproduced play by Theodore Reeves. Mervyn Leroy is being borrowed from Warners to direct, and he expects to begin the picture after Clark finishes "Soviet."

Meanwhile, the star-to-be is polishing up his guns for a hunting trip in Mexico. He'll leave as soon as "The White Sister" is given its final okay. In the more distant future, he'll journey to Europe to visit the Count and Countess Frasso.

William Haines threatens to become Hollywood's favorite interior decorator. Claudette Colbert had him do over her bedroom while she was in the East. This once was Greta Garbo's room, you know. Its furnishings were too severe for Claudette.

All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

ABOARD THE BUDAPEST-ATHENS EXPRESS.—It's four o'clock in the morning and high time that I was in bed. But the events that took place during the day that ended with the boarding of this train were so ridiculous that I'd like to set them down before I turn in. I am now in Jugoslavia and the Hungarian customs officials are far behind. So I imagine that my story can now be told without any trouble of any kind.

As I have written before, all monies must be declared upon entering any nation in central Europe. If they aren't you run the risk of having all your dough confiscated when you are examined upon leaving the border. That is the law of these countries and there's nothing you can do about it if you run into trouble. Declare your money and you're all right. Don't declare it—and look out.

Keep those facts in mind as I tell you the rest of this yarn. And rest assured that I exaggerate no circumstances as I report it . . .

Yesterday afternoon, just as I was finishing my column, I was advised by cable that $2,000 had been sent to me in care of a bank in Vienna. I was already in Budapest and hated the notion of traveling back to get the money. So I phoned the bank in question in Vienna and asked them if the money could be forwarded to Budapest. They said it could—and they gave me the name of the institution in which I would find it in the morning.

So far, so good. At 10 o'clock I presented myself at the proper spot and bowed to any number of officials. I had an interpreter with me, of course, and through him I stated my wishes. I was leaving for Athens that night, I said, and I would like to get my money as quickly as possible.

The general manager, I was told, would like to see me. I walked up two flights and he saw me. He asked me how I wanted my money. I told him I wanted it in American dollars.

He held a whispered consultation with his staff. They began to argue among themselves. Fifteen minutes went by. He turned to me.

"We will give it to you," he said, "but we must charge you 1½ per cent in order to give it to you in dollars."

What could I do? What could anyone have done? Since I was leaving that night, Hungarian bills had little value to me. So I accepted the stiff charge, plus the forwarding expenses from Vienna to Budapest, and told them to give me my money.

Slow? It was terrible! They had nothing like $2,000 in American money in that bank—and they had to send around town to get it. And the bad feature was that I had to be at another bank before 12 o'clock in order to get permission to take it out of the country. It was money, you see, that hadn't been declared on the way in.

At 14 minutes to 12—on the nose—I finally got my money. Three clerks had checked every denomination and when they eventually shoved it over to me, I almost fell over. The pile was larger than Carnera's feet. There were few big bills; most of them being ones, twos and fives. But they all spelled dough. So I grabbed the bills and ran. I had to be at the other bank before it closed.

Sound incredible? Had I done anything wrong? Why did I have to get permission to take from the country what had just been sent in? What was the whole thing about?

You're asking me? . . .

The interpreter looked at his watch—and then at me.

"We will just about make the other bank before it closes," he asserted calmly, "and I would like very much to urge you to let me do all the talking. You are inclined to be a trifle nervous, sir, and that breeds suspicion over here. I will get you permission to take your money out, sir. But let me urge you again to let me handle everything."

I told him to go to it. What else could I do?

At 6 minutes to 12 we were in the proper place. The guide explained my needs to a solemn gentleman with short hair and a long coat. He told us to go upstairs and see another gentleman. We climbed the stairs. The other gentleman had long hair and a short coat. He listened carefully and told us to go back to the first gentleman. The matter was not in his department.

By this time, I was on the verge of insanity. The guide was begging me to be quiet, and I was all for taking a punch at him for no good reason. A bell rang suddenly. The bank was closed . . . .

At exactly 25 minutes to 1, the first man we had seen—and one of the vice presidents of the bank—stood and listened to my story. Both men had their hats on and a watchman was all ready to throw me out bodily. I made one last, desperate effort.

"Tell these mugs," I cried, clutching my interpreter by his lapels, "that I am neither a bum, a convict nor a criminal. All I want to do is lease the country with my money. What's wrong? What's the trouble? What's it all about?

"The trouble lies with the other bank," he replied. "These gentlemen say they had no right to give you any American money. It is against the law for you to have it."

"But I've got it," I shrieked. "It's in my pocket—and it's mine. If they don't let me out with it tonight, maybe I'll speculate with it. Maybe I'll buy half the country. Maybe I'll hire an army. I'm liable to use it for almost everything!"

The guide repeated my words to the two men. They looked at one another, and the vice-president nodded. They spoke to the guide. The guide nodded. Everybody nodded. I nodded, too. Why not?

"They say," whispered the interpreter, "that you are right. You have made a bold and successful stroke. They are going to give you permission to take the money from the country—in traveller's checks."

In traveller's checks? Sore as I was, I had to grin to myself. Traveller's checks were okay with me because that, at least, meant that I could get out of the country. But it also meant that the American money was staying right there in Hungary. They weren't letting me get out with that.

I could write on for plenty of columns to tell you what happened after that—but I'm nearing the end of my space. So I will merely say that even though all banks were closed, I was able to get my traveler's checks without any trouble. When you are able to pay for a service, it's surprising how accommodating these foreign banks are.

There isn't much more. I boarded this train, clutching two precious documents close to me. One contained my traveler's checks. And the other, even more important, gave me permission to take the checks from the country. When I handed the latter document to the customs officials, I was to be safe at last.

As I told you in the opening of this story, the Hungarian customs are far behind. I still have my precious document which I shall never need. I still all my trouble, they never even paid me a visit! . . .

Barbara Star In Warner

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

The prison cycle of film, which began auspiciously with "The Big House," sagged with "Ladies of the Big House," and took a turn upwards with "I Am a Fugitive" and "20,000 Years in Sing Sing," swings downward again in "Ladies They Talk About," featuring Barbara Stanwyck. It is the current attraction in the Warner, and if, after all these penal expositions, you are not familiar with the rules and regulations pertaining to enforced confinement, here is your chance to become informed.

But between the time Miss Stanwyck acts as "front" in a bank robbery and the moment she confronts Preston S. Foster after her release, to try her accuracy as a pistol shot, you likely will find it pretty dull and uninteresting. The two incidents are the only ones that have any "punch" in them, and they are scarcely novel these days.

Miss Barbara makes a pretty prisoner, anyway, but there is a lot of good film wasted showing her about her new quarters and getting acquainted with other inmates of the same institution.

Pictorially or otherwise, the film does not have that dramtic grimness that fascinates in stories of this type. It is just a trivial tale in a drab atmosphere.

Ormandy to Conduct In Mosque Tonight

The Minneapolis Orchestra, Eugene Ormandy, conductor, will give concerts in Syria Mosque tonight and in Carnegie Music Hall tomorrow afternoon. Tonight the Brahm's Symphony No. 2 and the Academic Festival Overture, Stravinsky's Suite from "The Fire Bird," and Rimsky-Korsakow's Capriccio Espagnol will be the program. A popular program at popular prices will be given tomorrow afternoon at Carnegie Music Hall. Mr. Ormandy has arranged an all-Strauss program in the belief that the Johann and Joseph Strauss compositions are as truly classics as any great symphonic works. The program will include waltzes, polkas, marches, and the overture to Johann Strauss' "Die Fledermaus," (The Bat).

Testimony indicated the boy ran in front of the car. The costs were assessed against the defendant.

How Coughs and Colds Yield to Creosote

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist.

SPANISH PRINCE WOOS CUBAN

PARIS, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—The Prince of the Asturias, 25-year-old son of former King Alfonso of Spain, wants to marry a daughter of the De Pedro family of Cuba, reports from monarchist circles in Madrid said today, and is willing to renounce his right to the Spanish throne if necessary.

The De Pedro family is well known in this country, but no member of Spain's royal family ever has married outside royal blood. All his life the young prince has suffered from haemophilia, victims of which bleed at the slightest scratch, but his health has been improving and the doctors have told him he should recover.

STATE'S SCHOOL AID DELAYED

The depleted condition of the state's general fund has delayed payments to school districts in some counties for the first time since 1922, according to reports from Harrisburg.

Allegheny County has been one of eight successful in obtaining payments. At the office of County Superintendent C. E. Dickey, it was reported there has been no delay in payments to school districts here.

A court decision giving the Talbot Act relief fund payments priority over the school payments was responsible for delay in Bucks, Butler, Cambria and Cameron counties.

Woodcutter Hanged For Killing Woman

Cash Savings Hard to Beat

Especially a Saving of Half On Daily Necessity—But Here It Is, At Last!

To millions of people, a mouth-wash, gargle, or antiseptic lotion is a daily necessity—for halitosis (bad breath), oral hygiene, and other usual uses. The new Vicks Voratone Antiseptic—by the makers of Vicks VapoRub—brings to these millions savings of more than half on their antiseptic costs.

Born in a depression year, Vicks Antiseptic is priced accordingly. The regular size, large 10-ounce bottle—a usual 75c value—is only 35c.

Local druggists now have a special trial size—supplied them by the makers at below cost—to furnish actual proof of the quality and economy of Vicks Antiseptic. Each bottle contains 2½ ounces—a 25c value—but is priced at only 10c, while the supply lasts.

Factional Differences Session's Uncertainty

—By MARK SHIELDS—

The one thing creating uncertainty as to whether the Legislature will be able to complete a comprehensive economic program, including relief, and adjourn April 13 is inability to forecast with any precision just what the factional and party differences among members will be on any given subject.

Mr. Shields

There is doubt whether there is a really cohesive working majority in the House under control of the Republican organization, which has a bloc larger than the Republicans responsive to Gov. Pinchot, or the Democrats. The organization, however, will not say today that it has 105 members it can direct, it needs that many.

The blue law bill was no test of factional strength.

There have been two other votes, however, totaling a majority, which some observers have been analyzing. The difficulty in using them as measuring rods is that one was on a bill local to Philadelphia, and the other involved creation of a liquor commission to study legislation to be proposed in event the Eighteenth Amendment is modified or repealed.

Slight Break in Philadelphia Delegation

A slight split occurred in the Philadelphia delegation indicating that the followers of former Senator Joseph R. Grundy were opposed to increasing the permissive debt limit, which the Philadelphia organization desired. From other Grundy districts members rallied to the opposition, as did some Democrats and the majority of the members adhering to the Pinchot banner.

But there were legislators who declined to look on the occasion as a test who felt that with the great majority of the Philadelphia members desiring the legislation their wishes should be granted under the principle of home rule and who voted for the bill. Under these conditions it is impossible to classify this vote as any index which will hold in fights embracing an economic program or a major issue such as that surrounding the disposition of state highway money during the unemployment emergency.

The Liquor Commission bill received 108 votes, three more than the required majority. But on this proposition, backed by Representative Rhodes (Dem.), there was a disruption of the lines which obtained on the Philadelphia debt bill.

It was upstate Republicans, drys among them, who voted with Democrats for this bill, and included were Pinchoites, combining to override the opposition of the wet Philadelphia group. The two roll calls were confusing rather than helpful in arriving at any conclusions.

Liquor Commission Roll Call No Criterion

The Liquor Commission roll call, for example, is no criterion whatever as to what the vote will be next week on the dry repealer. The Philadelphians, probably to a man, will vote for that, while many who voted for the Liquor Commission will be in opposition.

The expressed reason for Philadelphia opposition to the Rhodes bill was that Gov. Pinchot is permitted to appoint the members. The Speaker of the House names three and the President pro tem of the Senate two, making up the body of seven. The Philadelphians were fearful that Mr. Pinchot might name pronounced drys.

Perhaps their fears are well grounded. Further this commission can act as a foundation for Mr. Pinchot in vetoing a dry repealer—if it passes—above and beyond any personal opinions he may have on the subject. He will be able to urge that there should be no repeal without a substitute, and that this substitute can be best found through the liquor commission.

The true test of sentiment will not come before the first week in March. It will be then, at the earliest, before any economy program, administrative, Republican organization or Democratic, is ready to move through the House.

Odd Things Likely As Weeks Pass

By that time it is expected that the Sterling Committee to study the costs of government, and the Turner State Government Committee, will be ready with recommendations of savings in State operation. It is doubtful if these programs will agree, and it is more likely that the Governor will agree with neither.

Until the economy program is thoroughly before the Legislature it is useless to deliberate on the various relief bills which have been introducued, each carrying appropriations of millions. The appropriations are not worth the paper they are written on if revenue is not provided to give them substance.

There are three ways to get that revenue—through economy, through transferring motor license and gas tax money to the general fund for direct relief, and through increasing taxes. All factions aver an antipathy to new taxes, but on the other plans there is no agreement whatever.

And, so far as turning thumbs down on new taxes, the same principle animated the special session last summer until it snarled itself in a hopeless maze of counter proposals and passed a hastily-drawn sales tax bill in a spirit of helpless hysteria. If this session should become similarly entangled—and you hear many oldtimers in Harrisburg predict it will—there may be some odd things occur as the weeks pass.

Carnegie Made Rapid Advancement When He Became a Railroader

Andrew Carnegie's star continues in the ascendant in this installment of Mr. Hendrick's biography. The 18-year-old boy attracts the favorable attention of Thomas A. Scott, superintendent of the Pennsylvania Railroad, who gives him a position at the then attractive salary of $35 a month. Railroading in those primitive days presented difficult problems, but Carnegie proved equal to them, and reward, in the form of promotion, came rapidly. In 1859, at the age of 24, he was appointed division superintendent.

FROM THE LIFE OF ANDREW CARNEGIE
by BURTON J. HENDRICK

Abridged for exclusive publication in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, by special permission of Mrs. Andrew Carnegie

Andrew, in his eighteenth year, left the telegraph company and entered the hurly-burly of railroading in Mr. Thomas A. Scott's office. He tells the circumstances in a letter to Uncle Lauder.

To George Lauder, Sr.
Pittsburgh, March, 14, 1853.
Dear Uncle:

. . . I have some news to tell you. I have left my place in the telegraph office and am now in the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, one of (if not the very first) the three leading roads from our Atlantic cities to the Great West. It forms a continuous line from Philadelphia to Pittsburgh and here connects with the western roads and the Ohio River. Mr. Scott, the superintendent of it, with whom I became acquainted while in the office by often talking for him on business by telegraph, offered me $35 per month to take charge of their telegraph office, which the company has in this city for its own exclusive use, and also to assist him in writing and auditing accounts, which I accepted. The telegraph company would have increased my salary to $400 per year if I had remained there, but we all thought that the new situation held out better prospects for the future. I resigned my station on the first of February and have been employed in my new place since that time.

I am liking it far better than the old one. Instead of having to stay every night till 10 or 11 o'clock I am done every night at 6—which is a great advantage—and am not so much confined. Although I thought my old berth a very good one for the present, still for the future I felt it did not hold out great inducements. I must always have been an employe, and the highest station I could reasonably expect to attain to was manager of an office with seven or eight hundred a year. I had begun to think that if another situation would turn up which would be better for the future, I would accept it, even though the salary was less than at present berth. He is having an office fixed up for his own use and I am to be along with him in it and help him. I have met with very few men that I like so well in this country—and I am sure we will agree very well. There is not much telegraphing to do but it is necessary for them to have an office. The line runs alongside of the R. Road and as there is only one track laid there yet, the time the different trains pass the stations must be known.

What do you think France is about? If they mean to be peaceful, as Napoleon says, what do they want so many new vessels of war for? It is thought here that another crisis like 1848 will soon take place. If you should happen to get into a fight with the Northern powers on the side of freedom we wont see you beat without giving you a helping hand. The day will yet come when the Banner of St. George and the Stars and Stripes will do good work side by side for "Liberty." I always get enthusiastic about it when I think of my Native and Adopted Countries Uniting against Despotism. But I must be brief—Aunt must excuse me for not writing a piece to her for I have something to say to Dod—and half of yours is hers you know—and my room is scanty. All friends here send both of you their best wishes for your welfare and I need not say so does.

Your much indebted nephew,
ANDREW CARNEGIE.

BARR PRESENTS CHURCH BRICK

The Aspinwall Lutheran Church will receive 2,000 bricks as a donation from County Commissioner C. M. Barr. He and his colleagues yesterday received a written request for the bricks, taken from buildings razed at Parkview. Commissioner C. C. McGovern was willing to grant the request, but Barr opposed giving away county property.

Director Ray Sprigle, of the department of property and supplies, said he had advertised the brick for sale and had sold some for $3 a thousand. Barr then said he would give Sprigle $6 for the supply the church asked and present it to the congregation.

We Get Western Weather; They Can Have It Back

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

New York temperatures dropped fifty degrees over night, but there's still enough to go round.

Wednesday the skies were blue, the sun was shining, the birds were rehearsing and everything was as pretty as earmarked gold westbound from Europe.

Yesterday an oldtimer looked for the mercury in his thermometer and said:

"Good, it's finally out of the red."

While California and Florida are arguing about their weather us easterners grab it all.

They promise us a blizzard. It's a beautifully thought. But we'd wish they would wait until St. Valentine's Day.

It will snow right up to our money pockets. And it won't make a bit of difference.

Novelty Wins Over Technique In Art Exhibit Prize Awards

Clothier, Salesman Among Victors; Kane Honored

The butcher, the baker and the candlestick maker stacked up against professional artists in the twenty-third annual exhibit of the Associated Artists of Pittsburgh, and did well. So well, in fact, they won nearly all the prizes.

True, none was a follower of the aforementioned professions. They were a clothier, a former house painter, a radio salesman, an interior decorator and an architect.

Esther Phillips, who was born in Russia, was awarded the women's prize.

Miss Phillips

One of the real professional artist to be awarded a prize is Alexander Kostellow, of the Fine Arts Department of Carnegie Institute of Technology. He received $25 for "Interior," the last figure painting.

GROUP WINNER SURPRISED

The other winners selected by the art jury from among the 380 canvases on view today in Carnegie Institute for the public, include Alfred H. Bennett, John Kane, Ralph Bowman, L. E. Blanchard, Blanchard and Edward B. Lee.

Mr. Bennett

Mr. Bennett, of 5650 Marlborough road, who won $250 for the best group of paintings in the show, is the manager of a Fifth avenue clothing store and owns a pants factory at Connellsville, Pa. His art work represents time salvaged from business life in week-ends, summer holidays and chance spare hours. He said:

"It was a big surprise to me to hear that I had won a prize and especially when a guy like myself is competing against high-powered artists. Painting is only a hobby with me and a means of relaxation from the business grind."

Mr. Bennett started to paint three years ago by copying paintings. This is the third time that he has been entered in the exhibit and his first art prize.

KANE'S 'BRIDGE' WINS

Mr. Kane, of 1700 Fifth avenue, who has for several years crashed big art shows, was given the first prize of $150 for his "Liberty Bridge." Mr. Kane, who loves to paint Pittsburgh's valleys and bridges was once a painter of boxcars and houses. He explained:

Mr. Kane

"I recall how I used to sketch the boys at work while sitting atop a boxcar. I would yell to one of them, 'Hold still, move over,'

Only Two Works of Trained Painters Picked by Jury

By PENELOPE REDD

The twenty-third annual exhibition of the Associated Artists of Pittsburgh was presented at Carnegie Institute last night with a private view. The show of 373 oil paintings, water colors, black and white drawings, prints, and sculptures, represents 162 artists.

Miss Redd

By and large the exhibition bears a bright countenance. At least 75 of the artists have the requisite technical excellence combined with originality of viewpoint to justify acceptance in the show.

Only two of the prizes for oil paintings, however, were awarded to artists in this category. Alexander Kostellow was given the Ida Smith Memorial prize for an oil painting of two or more figures. His "Interior" could hold its own with any of the contemporary na-

Dry Agents Raid Bar In New Kensington

Prohibition agents battered down the door of an alleged speakeasy in Ivy street, New Kensington, and found a 15-foot bar, nine gallons of whisky and 60 bottles of beer yesterday, they reported.

Another alleged speakeasy in Fourth avenue, Arnold, yielded the agents two gallons of whisky, they said. Confiscation of 21 pints of whisky, five gallons of alcohol, 76 bottles of beer and three quarts of wine was made in a club in Broad street, East End. Fifteen customers were standing at the bar when the agents entered. Four men were arrested in the raids.

SCOUT LEADERS TO MEET HERE

Nearly 1,000 scout leaders and their wives will meet at Schenley High School tomorrow night for the coordinated meeting of the Boy Scout councils in Allegheny and Beaver counties.

Dr. Robert F. Galbreath, president of Westminster College, will talk on the scout movement, and Arthur A. Schuck, director of the division of operations of the national council will speak on the "Ten Year Challenge" of the Boy Scouts. A pageant with 50 scouts taking part will open the program.

Sunday will be "Scout Sunday" in the churches included in the territory of the East Boroughs Boy Scout Council. Scouts will march to their respective churches in groups and will pledge allegiance to the flag and repeat the Scout oath and laws.

3 Children Share In $38,000 Estate

An estate of $38,000 was left by Mary Batty, Buffalo street, to three children by her will probated today.

Lydia A. Lepper left a $9,000 estate. She bequeathed $1,000 and property at 7634 Hamilton avenue to a sister-in-law, Ida May Lepper, and $1,000 each to Anna and Cora Conner, sisters of the sister-in-law.

Estate of $23,000 Divided Among Kin

James Milton Young, by his will probated yesterday, left an estate valued at $23,000. The home at 7220 Meade street was left to his three sons, M. B., L. D. and J. M. Young, Jr. He also left $5,000 each to M. B. and J. M. Young, Jr., and $6,500 to L. D. Young.

He left $5,000 to his sister, Elizabeth Y. Pohl; $1,000 to his daughter-in-law, Helen G. Young; $500 each to two nieces, Rosabelle Young and Ida Baird, and $500 to Mary Telker.

NEW MARKING ON BALLOT CHARGED

Names of Coyne, Muldowney Added to Democratic Votes

An evidence of fraud in the last election has been discovered, according to attorneys representing the Bar Association, now prosecuting a recount in various districts before Judge W. Heber Dithrich.

Trailing a ballot from which the number had not been removed, cast in the First District, Fourth Ward, the Bar Association attorneys discovered, they said, that it had been cast as a straight Democratic ballot and it now has an additional mark after the name of Senator James J. Coyne. Numerous cases of straight Democratic ballots being marked for either or both Senator Coyne or Congressman M. J. Muldowney, Republicans, have been found, but the court has ruled that no evidence of fraud has been shown on the face of the ballots.

ONLY 11 VOIDED

Out of 296 ballots queried in the first five districts recounted from the Third and Fourth wards, Judge Dithrich voided only 11 because of technicalities.

Unmoved by this outcome, Maj. E. Lowry Humes, chairman of the election frauds committee of the Allegheny County Bar Association, responsible for the recount, said

"We set out to disclose certain cases of election frauds, and we feel that we are realizing our purpose."

Humes' statement was given out after Judge Dithrich ruled against this offer to prove there were more ballots cast than there were registered in the Twelfth District of the Fourth Ward, a stronghold of Senator James J. Coyne.

REPEATS RULING

Judge Dithrich made a similar ruling in the case of the Twelfth District, Tenth Ward, today, when Humes contended there were only 384 registered voters, of whom 368 were checked as voting, while the returns showed 415 votes for congressional candidates and 413 votes for state senatorial candidates.

LUMBER GROUP HOLDS BANQUET

Final business sessions in the convention of the Retail Lumber Dealers' Association of Western Pennsylvania were being held in Webster Hall today. Its annual banquet was held last night. Speakers were A. M. Haines, of Connellsville, and the Rev. David Lang, of the Shady Avenue Presbyterian Church.

George N. Glass, president of the Keystone Lumber Company, of Pittsburgh, late yesterday was elected president. He succeeds C. A Derby, of Monessen. Others elected were:

Vice presidents, D. E. Olson, of Titusville, and H. G. Walker, of Windber; secretary, R. F. McCrea, of Pittsburgh; treasurer, G. P. Textor, of Pittsburgh, and general counsel, Carl Van der Voort, of Pittsburgh. McCrea and Textor were re-elected.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Feb. 10.
To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

England had no idea they would kick up such a fuss just by suggesting that they settle in cash. The Senate howled, how dare you offer us cash, so I guess England will just have to keep on owing us.

Will Rogers

Here is one for the book. Hollywood is having its first divorce forced on it. That old rich Oklahoma Indian that lives out here, the government wants him to divorce his wife. Well, they are happy and don't want to be divorced. The government claims they could pick him out a cheaper wife. Says he don't want a cheap wife. I imagine the Indian agent would like to marry him themselves. So poor old Hollywood, they won't let you live happy if you want to. Yours,

WILL.

COUNTY SALARY SHOWD OWN DUE SOON

The County Commissioners having gone on record as refusing to deal collectively with other elected officials in salary retrenchment, a showdown is expected soon on whether the Commissioners, through salary board action, can limit the pay and personnel of county offices not under their immediate control.

The elected officials are hoping for help through a court ruling on the case of Sheriff Frank I. Gollmar, seeking pay for special deputies, or the support in the Legislature for the Coyne bill giving the Commissioners only one vote instead of three on the salary board.

INVITATION REJECTED

Receiving an invitation to a conference with elected officials, the Commissioners, two to one, decided against any general discussion, ruling the elected officials must appear singly for salary board action. Commissioner W. D. Mansfield presented a motion accepting the conference invitation, but it was rejected by Commissioners C. M. Barr and C. C. McGovern.

Barr said:

"Under the law there is only one place to hold a salary board meeting and that is in this place. We should summon in the elected officials, one by one, to discuss salary equalization in their offices."

HITS PROPAGANDA

McGovern declared:

"The attempt of the Commissioners to carry out their pledges to the public has brought on unsportsman-like, unpatriotic, insidious propaganda, open and under cover. Public officials have incited their subordinates so as to place the Commissioners in an unreasonable position.

"There should be a standardization of salaries. They have been fixed, not on efficiency and skill, but on politics and relationship to those who set the salaries. All kinds of threats have been made against the Commissioners and this would include violence if it were possible to stir up the elements.

"People say this is the wrong time to cut salaries. We don't intend to cut them——we are trying to equalize them."

He cited cases of men doing the same work and one getting $275 a month while the other receives $175.

Mansfield had agreed to meet with the other officials providing the session was open to newspapermen. He said he would attend no private conference on salaries.

KLINE IN VITED TO LOAN PARLEY

Mayor Charles H. Kline has received an invitation from Mayor Frank Murphy, of Detroit, to attend a conference and discuss amendment of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation act.

Mayor Murphy proposes amending the act so cities may borrow from the R. F. C. to refund municipal debts. He suggested the conference be held February 17 in Washington.

Invitations went to Mayors of several other of the larger cities. Kline has not yet accepted, according to his secretary.

COX TO DEFEND PRIMARY LAW

A protest meeting against abolition of the primary will be held Tuesday night in the South High School Auditorium, with Congressman-elect Henry Ellenbogen and the Rev. James R. Cox, of Old St. Patrick's Church, as the speakers.

Discussing the proposed abolition of the primary laws, Mr. Ellenbogen said:

"The bosses have not yet abandoned their plans to kill the popular primary election. They are only fighting among themselves about the division of the expected spoils. They were surprised by the outcry of the people against the restoration of the rotten convention system. If the public clamor would subside, the political rulers might agree among themselves and quickly revive the Prince-Chapman bill for abolition of the primaries."

Two Divorces Asked, Seven Suits Granted

Divorces were granted to Mildred Raymus from Martin T. Raymus, Esther G. Swartz from Howard S. Swartz, Mary Felko from Andy Felko, Pauline K. Cowan from J. M. Cowan, Henrietta E. Fulkrod from Herbert L. Fulkrod, Herbert A. Geesey from Marie M. Geesey, Sadie M. Walter from John G. Walter.

Girls Get Much Fun Out of Identical Appearance

Back in Pittsburgh today, after visiting most of the eastern cities in the last 10 years, the sisters have many interesting yarns to spin. The pranks they once perpetrated on school teachers and chums were mild, they agreed, compared to those which marked their travels. They said together:

"When it comes to fooling people as to our identity, we get our biggest thrill out of puzzling Pullman porters and bellhops."

The twins enhance their physical likeness by dressing identically. The girls, who work as demonstrators for Apex Ironers, said:

"We really enjoy looking alike and dressing alike. And we wouldn't want to be anything but twins."

Blast Furnace Men In Conference Here

A technical conference to be closed with a dinner tonight was being held by the Eastern States Blast Furnace and Coke Oven Association today in William Penn Hotel. Leaders in the sessions included William A. Haven, R. W. Campbell, Fred Denig, John T. Whiting and T. L. Joseph, of the United States Department of Commerce.

HOUSE DESIGN DISPLAY HELD

Designs for house models in the competition conducted by the Pittsburgh Chapter, American Institute of Architects, and the Pittsburgh Architectural Club, to aid unemployed draftsmen, were to be placed on display in Kaufmann's today. The competition is being sponsored by the store.

The display will be open to the public until next Tuesday. The following day winners will be announced, R. M. Trimble, chairman of the emergency committee, Pittsburgh Chapter, American Institute of Architects, said today.

The jury which will decide the winning models is composed of Mrs. T. M. Stahlman, president of the Congress of Women's Clubs; Mrs. Charles Shoemaker, president of the Twentieth Century Club; Mrs. J. Verner Wasson, representative of the Junior League; Mrs. George M. Swan, president of the College Club of Pittsburgh; Mrs. Leo L. Half, president of the Council of Jewish Women; Press C. Dowler, president of Pittsburgh Chapter, American Institute of Architects; Ralph M. Griswold, president of Pittsburgh Architectural Club; Brandon Smith and Camille Grapin, of Carnegie Institute of Technology.

MOTHER LINKED IN GIRL BEATING

KALAMAZOO, Mich., Feb. 10.—(AP.)—Kathleen Britton, 8, was unconscious at a hospital here today in a serious condition as a result, police said, of being beaten last Monday. Physicians held little hope for her recovery. Her 11-year-old brother is recovering from the less serious effects of a beating.

Their mother, Mrs. Margaret Britton, 33, and Cody Calloway, 38, who lives at the Britton home, are held by authorities. Police said each accused the other of the beatings.

According to Police Commissioner Ralph Chapman, Mrs. Britton said that Calloway beat the children and "punched Kathleen in the stomach and shoved her against the wall" to punish her for misbehavior. Calloway maintains that it was the mother who beat the children, the Commissioner said.

The girl's condition was discovered after her brother, Sylvester, collapsed at his desk in school and his teacher found his back covered with welts and bruises. Police went to his home, where they discovered Kathleen unconscious.

Roosevelt Shuns 'Beauty' Touch By Sculptor

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—(Universal.)—President-elect Roosevelt refused to permit his nose to be "prettied" when he sat for Mrs. Ruth Yates, local sculptor, recently. The portrait head will be cast into bronze.

Mr. Roosevelt evinced considerable interest in the work in progress and offered personal criticism. Mrs. Yates said:

"He knew more about the shape of his head than any subject that ever sat for me. He even pointed out a 'knob,' as he called it, on the tip of his nose and insisted that I include it."

Frozen to Death In Wrecked Auto

WASHINGTON, Pa., Feb. 10.—In his wrecked auto, the body of W. B. Hewitt, 45, was found frozen today, within a half-mile of his home on the Lone Pine road. Hewitt, 45, for 26 years a motorman on the Pittsburgh Railways Company, had intended remaining in Washington last night on account of the cold, and his absence caused no alarm. A passing motorist investigated an auto wrecked against a tree, and found Hewitt inside the car, dead.

WIFE BLAMES JEALOUSY

Jealousy of young men, patrons of their Mt. Washington confectionery store, caused her husband to accuse her unjustly, Mrs. Elizabeth M. Menigast, 231 Albert street, testified before Judge John P. Egan in her divorce suit against Anthony J. Menigast.

She said disputes she had with her husband over his charges resulted in her having him arrested. She continued:

"But I paid his fine to teach him a lesson."

Mrs. Menigast testified after her husband left her a woman telephoned her, saying:

Mrs. Menigast, she testified, retorted that the woman could keep him.

Boy's Injury Costs Pup's Owners $1,000

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—One thousand dollars' damages for a puppy's bites was awarded by a jury today. Dr. and Mrs. J. Edgar Klund, owners of the dog, were ordered to pay $875 to 3-year-old John Pappas, Jr., for a torn ear, and $125 to his parents for medical expenses.

TOWN OFFICIALS UNDER FIRE

More than 100 members of the Taxpayers' Co-operative League of Tarentum at a meeting last night voted unanimously to seek legal action against Robert F. Pitcairn, Borough Treasurer, and Sam H. Haslet, Borough Solicitor, both officials in the Tarentum Savings and Trust Company, which closed its doors a year ago last fall. Pitcairn was treasurer of the bank and Haslet a director.

The motion for legal action was made by Hugh N. Britton, a former Councilman. Recalling that the borough had $124,000 deposited in the bank when it closed and that Pitcairn was found to have posted his personal bond, instead of a surety bond for $150,000, Britton said:

"In my opinion there is room for criminal procedure against both Pitcairn and Haslet in regard to this tied-up borough money, and I am asking this league to go on record as approving legal action."

The resolution was carried unanimously.

ART PRIZES GO TO CLOTHIER, SALESMAN

and soon I would have them down on paper.

Mr. Bowman

"I never expected to win."

The third prize winner, Mr. Blanchard, of 413 Arch street, is an interior decorator by trade. Mr. Blanchard joined the Associated Artists in January. He amilingly said:

"I have always gone to the exhibits and enjoyed them and wished that I had a painting of mine own hung. I never dreamed that I would win a prize."

PAINTS AS HOBBY

His "Brady's Bend" won him $50. Mr. Blanchard has been painting as a hobby for the past 12 years and likes especially landscape work.

Mr. Blanchard

Miss Phillips, of 5531 Jackson street, was given the women's prize of $25 for her picture, "Looking Down Brady Street Bridge." Upon hearing of the money award she expostulated:

"It is ridiculous and incongruous to give such a small amount of money for a women's prize. I don't see how trousers necessarily make one a better artist."

For the best water color in the exhibit, Architect Lee, of 619 William Penn way, said:

"It certainly was a big surprise to me when I heard that I had won a prize. Architects are not supposed to get into the painting business, but I thought I would take a chance like Christopher Columbus."

NOVELTY WINS AT ART EXHIBIT

Esther Phillips received the prize contributed by the alumnae of the former Pittsburgh School of Design for Women. In "Looking Down Brady Street Bridge," Miss Phillips has styled local truth into tremendously effective pattern.

NOVELTIES WIN

John Kane seems a veritable pied piper in leading juries to express preference for the naive while in Pittsburgh. In New York or elsewhere, the jurors rarely express this impulse by the award of prizes. However, Pittsburgh released their sense of frustration "with the boredom of it all," and they conferred a majority of their awards on novelties.

While one is entirely sympathetic with the pleasure of the recipients of the prizes, one must declare that it is a discouraging state of affairs. If nationally distinguished jurors deliberately prefer a "different" kind of picture which is born of an obvious lack of the vocabulary of painting, then why should anyone try to master the technical obstacles?

A majority of the painters in Pittsburgh are engaged in teaching art. They must be hard put to rationalize the jury verdicts to their students. They evidently were handicapped in the eyes of the jury by possessing a trained approach to art. The jury has maintained the same predilection for novelty in their selection of the exhibition as a whole. Many painters are omitted whose work has for years helped to build up the standard of the local annual exhibitions before the fad for "primitive" art was imported from France. We cannot subscribe to all of the jury's conclusions at the current annual of the Associated Artists with the knowledge that excellent painters were rejected.

NOTABLE PAINTINGS

Of the many paintings in the exhibition that we enjoyed, we may note briefly, Edward B. Lee's prize water color; the New England canvases by Clifford Bayard; Louise Boyer's prints; Nancy Walter Canetta's "Corner of the Studio;" Sister M. Clare's "The Gardener;" Marcella Comes' "Florabella;" Samuel Filner's "Julian;" David Fraser's "Midnight;" Everett Glasgow's "Toward the Bay;" Roy Hilton's "Building of Mellon Institute;" Mary Martha Himler's "My South View;" Russel T. Hyde's "Shadows;" J. C. Kilroy's "Recess;" T. Ralph Lias' "Summer Studio;" R. D. Long's "The Builders;" Norwood MacGilvary's "Dawn;" Lucy Marlowe's "Woman in Red;" Caroline Oliver's "The Pond;" Charles W Patterson's "Stanton Avenue;" water colors by both the Permars; Milan Petrovits' "Portrait of an Elderly Lady;" Samuel Rosenberg's group of Pittsburgh paintings; Sue Neal Ryerson's "Blue and Amber;" Henry Scott's "Girl Reading;" William Shulgold's entire group; Raymond Simboli's portrait; loyal George Sotter's Bucks County nocturne; Christian Walter's "Gimbels at Christmas Time;" Everett Warner's "Birches;" Edward Weber's "Lilies and Narcissus;" Anna Woodside's two vital still life studies; Martha Zeigler's "Behind the Kitchen Door," and many, many others. The exhibition closes March 9.

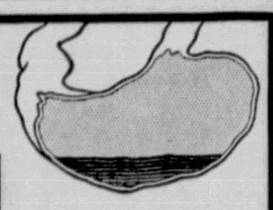
Mellor Visions Gain In 'Smoke Battle'

An exceptional opportunity to make progress in air purification will be afforded with the turn for industrial recovery, H. B. Mellor, head of the air pollution investigation at Mellon Institute of Industrial Research, said in a magazine article today.

Writing in the current issue of "Aerologist—Indoor Air," Mellor said many establishments are faced with the necessity for altering or replacing worn-out or obsolete fuel-burning equipment. All new plants will have a chance to install modern types of heat and power-making appliances, making possible nearly smokeless operation, he added.

SLOW STOMACH



DIETING WON'T HELP — THIS WILL

Most "indigestion" has been found imaginary! The pains and gas and all that misery are real, of course. But nine times in ten they are symptoms only of slow stomach.

Did you know you can regulate your stomach to empty in six hours, as it should? That this is as easy as moving the bowels?

One box of Pape's Diapepsin will test your stomach and correct your digestion time in a couple of days—at a cost of twenty-five cents!

Each tablet of diapepsin saves the stomach half an hour's labor. If your stomach is an hour slow, two tablets will remedy the trouble. Then eat anything. Baked beans every noon if you like them. Lobster at midnight suppers. These will digest like crackers and milk in a six-hour stomach!

Pape's Diapepsin stimulates the gastric flow. Use it freely until the stomach is working right without any help. When it slows down, take diapepsin again for a day or two. This helps coffee drinkers and hard smokers, too.

TARIFF LEADER PRAISES HOME BUYING DRIVE

Nearly 400 industrial and commercial leaders of Pittsburgh heard William L. Monro, president of the American Window Glass Company and the American Tariff League, commend highly the Hearst newspapers for their "Buy American" campaign.

Speaking yesterday in the Chamber of Commerce, he urged the protection of American markets for American industries, asserted trade recognition of Russia would mean added importations of cheap products into a market already overwhelmed by foreign competition, and declared:

"The brunt of increased competition will fall with crushing weight on American labor. A factory can close down, a furnace can be drawn and a machine can stop to await the return of better days. But there is no such waiting for better days for our workers. They must work if they are to live and we are to survive."

URGES STRONG TARIFF

Pointing out the depreciated currencies of 44 nations, due to their complete or partial slip off the gold standard, he urged the adoption of a tariff policy which will not open our markets to the low cost producers and labor of foreign countries.

Answering the argument that tariff protection prevents the restoration of foreign markets to America, he declared that:

"Thanks the operations of our international bankers, during the years from 1923 to 1928, the American people paid for the exports with which we filled the holds of almost every outgoing ship during the whole of the late-lamented boom years.

"In fact, as matters stand today, it can almost be said that we gave away most of the exports we shipped out in the predepression years. I believe that our export trade advocates have the burden of telling us and the American people, who really is going to pay for the export business we buy at the price of tearing down our tariff?"

He declared the United States regularly consumes over 90 per cent of its own total production, and added:

"A return of our domestic consuming capacity is what we need and not a greater volume in our export trade."

PRAISES MOVEMENT

Of "Buy American" he said:

"I am informed that in the opinion of one of these legislators the failure of our efforts last spring and summer to secure remedial legislation was due in part to the lack of appreciation in the country generally of the menace of this unfair foreign competition in our markets. I think this probably was the case six months ago; in fact, I think it was probably the case up until about a month ago.

"But the last 30 days has brought a development on this score of tremendous importance. About a month ago, the Hearst newspaper chain, impressed by the seriousness of depreciated-currency imports to our industries and our workers, started a popular campaign of truly heroic proportions in support of Congressional action against these ruinous importations.

"This campaign by the Hearst newspapers is, in my opinion, a great public service to the American people. Here is a power that can educate and arouse the people to the seriousness of this unfair foreign competition in our markets, and the Congress never met that dares remain adamant to the demands of an aroused people."

Picnickers Denied Permit Because of Dance Hall

Believing the Methodist Episcopal Church opposed dancing as a recreation for its younger members, John Jay Burke, manager of the county parks, refused the Millvale Methodist Episcopal Church a permit to hold its picnic in Rose Grove, North Park, next July, the County Commissioners have been informed.

In a letter to the board, G. E. Dillman, a member of the church, said Burke declared that because Rose Grove had a dance pavillion, and because he knew the church opposed dancing, he was holding up the permit.

Commissioner W. D. Mansfield and Chief Clerk William T. Rees said they were Methodists and had danced at picnics. The Commissioners directed the letter be sent to Park Director A. M. Marion for adjustment.

2 Trousered Girls Held as Runaways

Two trousered high school girls who police said ran away from their homes in Washington, D. C., were being held in Juvenile Detention home today awaiting the arrival of their parents.

The girls, taken into custody by Squirrel Hill police, gave their names as Freida Poole and Eleanor Payne, both 15. They said they left home February 1. Since then they hitch-hiked, begged meals and slept in vacant houses, police said.

3 Dental Offices In Tarentum Looted

Tarentum police today are searching for thieves who robbed three dental offices of gold and office equipment yesterday. Skeleton keys were used to enter the offices of Dr. John Alter and Dr. W. Earl Johnston, while access to Dr. T. P. Beattie's office was gained by climbing over a partition.

LID ON COUNTY PENSION AID

Officers of the County Pension Fund today were to be notified officially that the County Commissioners, knowing the fund in its present state is unsound, have no legal right to make further contributions. They also were to be notified that unless the newly proposed reforms are adopted, the Commissioners can authorize no more county funds.

Special Solicitor Mortimer B. Lesher yesterday gave the Commissioners the legal aspects of the pension question in a session attended by William Berger, head of the fund.

Berger said the majority of directors of the fund were in accord with the new plan. Baird said he and his fellow board members had been blamed for criticizing the Commissioners in connection with the fund, but said the remarks came from individuals.

Ice Cream Served Year Round Is Nutritious Dessert

This Delectable Food Was Known in the Seventeenth Century—Modern Methods Insure Its Wholesomeness.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D., Ph. D.
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

In every home, ice cream is a favorite dessert. At one time merely a popular summer dish, it is now used every month in the year.

Ice cream was made in Italy as early as the seventeenth century. Its popularity then spread to England and during the eighteenth century it was introduced into America.

Question has been raised as to who first used ice cream in this country. Some historians claim that Dolly Madison first served it at a presidential reception. Another story states that Mrs. Alexander Hamilton originated its use, serving it to a group of government officials. At any rate, ice cream is now recognized as an American dish and we consume more ice cream than any other nation in the world.

Ice cream varies from simple cream or thickened milk, sweetened and flavored, to that made with eggs and mixed with fresh or preserved fruits and nuts. French ice cream is made with a cooked custard base.

WHOLESOME FOOD

Condensed or dried milk is now used in place of cornstarch which used to be employed as a filler in the making of cheaper kinds of ice cream. Junket is an excellent substance for making ice cream. It renders the milk and cream more digestible and improves and thickens the product.

The commercial manufacture of ice cream has indeed become a great industry. A mechanical mixer is used and refrigerated rooms serve the place of ice and salt to harden ice cream. Those who do not make their ice cream at home are assured of a pure and wholesome food. Modern refrigeration is a great aid to the housewife who wishes to make her own ice cream.

The manufacture of ice cream is under rigid supervision of the food and health laws. If you have ever visited an ice cream plant, as I have, you will be pleased with the immaculate, hygienic surroundings. In this industry, inferior ingredients or harmful coloring matter are no longer used.

Ice cream is a wholesome and nutritious food. It is made of pure food substances.

GOOD FOR CONVALESCENTS

It is of great value in the diet of patients suffering from high fever. For the convalescent patient it is an excellent food. It is pleasing to the eye and palate, and easily digested. Ice cream helps supply milk to children who refuse to take their daily quota of milk.

Ice cream used in moderation is a desirable and nutritious food. It contains carbohydrates, fats and proteins. In addition, important vitamins are found in it. The nutritive elements are increased when fruits, nuts and other foods are added to the mixture. Rich ice creams are best served with a light meal rather than a heavy one.

I can think of no dessert that is as nutritious and easily digested as ice cream. It can be served during the winter months and, of course, is always welcome during the summer days.

NEGLECT OF COMMON CONSTIPATION IS A SERIOUS MATTER

Prevent This Condition With Kellogg's ALL-BRAN

The first question your doctor asks is whether you are constipated or not. He knows that this condition may cause headaches, loss of appetite and energy, sleeplessness. It is often the starting point of serious disease.

You can prevent and relieve common constipation so easily. Just eat a delicious cereal once a day. Laboratory tests show that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides "bulk" to exercise the intestines, and vitamin B to further aid regular habits. ALL-BRAN is also a rich source of blood-building iron.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that found in leafy vegetables. Within the body, it forms a soft mass. Gently, it clears out the intestinal wastes.

Isn't this "cereal way" safer and far more pleasant than taking patent medicines—so often harmful? Two tablespoonfuls of ALL-BRAN daily are usually sufficient. With each meal in serious cases. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Enjoy ALL-BRAN as a cereal, or use in cooking. Get the red-and-green package at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

HELD IN HIT-RUN DEATH WHEN ALIBI FAILS

His efforts to establish an alibi unavailing, Joseph Rand, 35, of 5544 Bryant street, was being held today for grand jury action on a charge of manslaughter.

A Coroner's jury yesterday found Rand operated an automobile which figured in the hit-and-run killing of Lawrence Sutton, 45, of 7 Courtwright street.

Testimony disclosed Sutton was struck at Brighton and Woodlawn roads, the night of January 26 and was left to die after being carried seven squares on the bumper of the machine.

Rand denied knowledge of the killing, but admitted borrowing the car. He said it had been stolen while he was in a drug store at Perrysville avenue and East street.

Coroner W. J. McGregor reprimanded Rand when he said he had not reported the theft until half an hour later. His reason for this, Rand said, was that he did not have an owner's card or know the number of the car.

Helen and Anna Yarman, 3962 Oakdale street, testified Rand called on them that night, and that the car was stolen when he went out to buy ginger ale and cigarets.

The car was recovered the day after the accident.

ROAD JOB FIGHT TO BE AIRED

The County Commissioners will meet next Thursday morning with P. J. Dagnall, business representative of the Hoisting Engineers Union, to discuss difficulties in the county's improvement program on the Bairdford road. Public works officials say union hoisting engineers have refused to report for work a half hour earlier, consequently delaying trucks making hauls.

The South Tenth Street Bridge will be opened Saturday afternoon without formalities, the Commissioners said today. It was at first planned to have a program of speech-making, but this was dropped when South Side civic groups announced they lacked funds to participate in such a celebration.

Walter M. Miller, of Wilson, has asked the County Commissioners to consider his proposal of installing of fire protection at the airport. For $300 a month, Miller offers to keep a motorcycle, loaded with chemicals on duty, with driver, 24 hours a day.

Second of Brothers Hanged for Attack

CARTHAGE, Mo., Feb. 10.—(INS.)—Harry Worden, former Joplin barber, paid with his life on the gallows here today for attacking a Carthage high school girl in a holdup. He went to death almost a year after his brother, Lew Worden, was hanged for attacking the same girl. Lew pleaded guilty but Harry stood trial.

CONTEST OVER HENDERSON WILL ENDS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—A division of the estate of Mrs. Mary F. Henderson, long a leader of Washington society, has been agreed upon by claimants.

The understanding was reached only a few hours before the validity of her last will was sustained yesterday by the District of Columbia Supreme Court.

The assessed value of Mrs. Henderson's estate, including the famous "Henderson Castle" on Sixteenth street, was placed at $1,600,000.

SHARE ESTATE

Under the terms of the agreement this will be divided among a niece and nephew in New York; Mrs. Beatrice Wholean, who was said by Mrs. Henderson to have been her son's adopted daughter; the Battle Creek College, and several other beneficiaries. The exact terms of the settlement, reached after an all night conference were not revealed.

The will of Mrs. Henderson, who was the widow of Senator Henderson, of Missouri, as filed for probate, disinherited Mrs. Wholean, although a former will was said to have named her as the principal beneficiary. She attacked the validity of the document, contending that Mrs. Henderson was not mentally competent to execute the will.

KELLOGG'S PROTEST

John F. Kellogg, of the Battle Creek College, also protested on the ground his institution had been named a beneficiary under an earlier will, but had been excluded from the final one.

The will as admitted to probate today named as principal beneficiary, Henry Arnold, of New York City, and Frances Arnold, of Cornish, N. H., the nephew and niece of the aged society dictator. It also directed the payment of $100,000 cash to Jesse Shima, a Japanese who acted as Mrs. Henderson's secretary for some time prior to her death. Other bequests to servants and friends were listed.

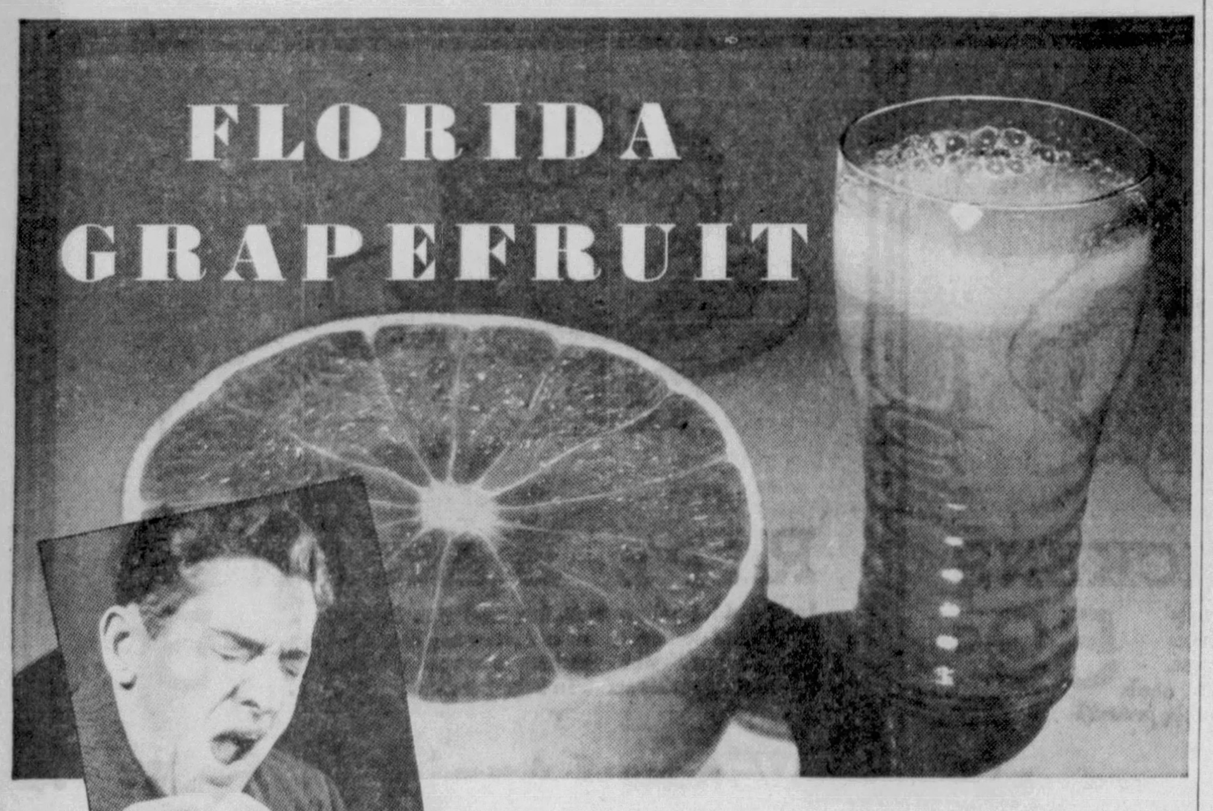
FLORIDA GRAPEFRUIT



Nature's safeguard against the "flu"

AN ALKALINE reaction in your system will help keep flu away—and Florida grapefruit (Nature's biggest package of Vitamin C) creates this highly desired condition in these dangerous days when flu is stalking through the land. Eat the fruit, drink the juice in abundance and with delight — it's such a happy way of helping keep away the dreaded enemy flu. Florida oranges are equally effective — mix Florida orange and grapefruit juice, the combination will delight you—the flavor is better than either (if possible), a perfect blend of goodness! In these unsettled winter days, Florida citrus juice is a sunshine cocktail supreme. Florida grapefruit are bulging with goodness — cannonballs of citrus delight—and Florida oranges, regardless of size, are bargains in extra juice. The small ones are extraordinary values if juice is what you want. Three times a day or more — salute your taste and safeguard your health!

TANGERINES WILL TANTALIZE YOUR TASTE

Florida tangerines are the third member of Florida's famous citrus fruits — but so different. The peel comes off with one twist of the thumb. The segments come apart like the petals of a rose. Each is a delicious, healthful mouthful. Nothing can equal them in salads. Buy a dozen today.

Life of Andrew Carnegie

Hogan's house and lot but I'm pretty sure I did. Mother says that rents are so very high—tradesmen pay about 6 and 8 dolls. per Mo. for houses with four rooms—so we concluded to risk a little and bought it for $550. The property is worth about $700. But Andrew Hogan wanted to sell it and could get no better bargain, as it was not long after the flood and some money had to be spent for repairs. We have two years to pay it in.

And so, less than five years after arrival, the Carnegies were comfortably established. They had reached that acme which, in the Scottish mind at least, signifies independence, for they were landed proprietors, the owners of the Rebecca street house which had formerly been the Hogan home. They had made many friends.

Andrew's change to the Pennsylvania made him the associate of one of the most remarkable characters of the time. The two men chiefly responsible for the development of American transportation were Cornelius Vanderbilt and Thomas A. Scott, and the latter of these brilliant pioneers now became the dominant influence in Carnegie's life. The transactions that afterward made Mr. Scott's name historic were still in the future; he was a young man, just reaching his thirtieth year, yet his business talents had already been displayed in a restricted field. Born on a farm in Blair County, Pennsylvania, sent out into the world to earn his living when little more than a child, working in turn as farm boy, clerk in a country store, and station agent in a backwoods village, Scott's beginning had many points in common with Carnegie's own. His charming bearing, his forceful leadership, his tireless industry, and his far-seeing vision had already made him one of the most commanding figures in the State.

A Quick Decision

One day a friend told Andrew that Mr. Scott had been inquiring about his plans. Would it be possible to detach the boy from the telegraph company? "I told him," said this friend, "that this could not be done. Nothing could persuade you to give up your present job."

"Not so fast," replied Andrew. "Mr. Scott can have me if he wants me. Go and tell him so."

Here we have one of those instantaneous decision that so largely explain Carnegie's success.

American railroads then had hardly passed their infancy; in 1853 the Pennsylvania itself was merely a single track extending from Philadelphia to Pittsburgh. It had no private telegraph line, the new method of communication being used only sparingly in dispatching trains. Occasionally crises arose that demanded an indulgence in this expensive luxury, and at such times Mr. Scott would visit the office in person. The operator with whom he invariably dealt was Andrew Carnegie. Something in the two men attracted one another, for, the business safely transacted, they would usually drop into a personal chat. The entertaining man of thirty and the keen-witted boy discovered that they had many ideas and aspirations in common, and as a result of these meetings they became excellent friends.

Scott now began a series of comprehensive improvements. The development of the service between Philadelphia and Harrisburg, the establishment of a continuous route to the Ohio River, the abolition of the portage railway and the building of a line across the mountains, called for the introduction of modern ideas in all directions, and among the innovations now brought forward was a telegraph line for the exclusive use of the Pennsylvania. The accidents resulting from running large numbers of freight and passenger trains in both directions on a single track had become one of the greatest scandals of the day, and the new telegraph clearly indicated a means by which the dangers might be decreased. In selecting an operator for this independent wire, Mr. Scott turned naturally enough to his little friend in the Pittsburgh office. As telegraphing would occupy only a part of Andrew's time, it was planned that he should serve also as a kind of general utility man and as private secretary to Mr Scott. The salary marked an improvement in his fortunes, for his $25 a month in the old place was increased to $35. "I could not imagine," Carnegie would say afterward, "what I was ever going to do with so much money." And thus in a short time the young man found himself installed as Mr Scott's satellite in the Pennsylvania system, Andrew and his hero occupying the same office in the old "outer depot" of Pittsburgh. In railroad circles Carnegie became known as "Scott's Andy"—a title in which he took the greatest delight, himself recording his exultation when, one day, J Edgar Thomson, the president of the Pennsylvania, put his head through the door, looked at the small figure, and asked, "Are you Mr. Scott's Andy?"

Rapid Promotion

That the experiment turned out happily is plain from Andrew's successive promotions. Scott spent three years in the Pittsburgh office and then moved to Altoona, as general superintendent. Carnegie accompanied him in the capacity of right-hand man, and when, in 1859, Scott became vice president of the Pennsylvania, practically his first official act was the appointment of Carnegie as superintendent of the western division. Carnegie spent 12 years as an active railroad executive, under the immediate supervision of the man whose far-reaching genius has had so profound an influence on railroad transportation in this country.

The daily procedure of railroad management presents few episodes of striking interest. The business of routing trains, supervising employes, settling strikes, clearing up wrecks and attending to a thousand details of executive character is, after all, a humdrum one, and Carnegie's life was essentially the same as that of a multitude of railway men, before and since. That it was a severe and rugged experience is apparent. Railroading in those early days was not a trade that tended to develop gentle manners; it was new, somewhat frontier in its nature, and attracted a free-living, undisciplined crew of train hands. Sailors from the sea, disappointed gold seekers from the West, new immigrants from crowded cities—these and other similarly emancipated roisterers turned naturally to a new field that promised excitement as well as opportunities for progress.

TELL IT TO ELSIE

By ELSIE ROBINSON

Mother of an Unwed Mother Suffers Severely

Unwed mothers of nameless babies—many a time we have heard their sad stories in this column, and hundreds have written offering them comfort to soothe their shame.

But how about the mother of such a girl? How about her shame?

Suppose you were such a mother, and that branded girl were the little daughter you had loved and served through anxious years—what would you do in her black hour?

Would you tell her to come home? Would you take her and her baby to your heart, and help her to face the world proudly?

Or would you feel that she had wronged you beyond all forgiveness, and tell her to never darken your door again?

Terrible questions? Yes. But here is a mother who had to face them. Would you have done as she did?

SHOCKED BY REPORT

Dear Elsie Robinson:

I have just read in your column about Rose and her fatherless baby, and how her people insist that she give it up, and I want to tell my story. Maybe it will help some other mother of such a girl.

For I have just had that same thing happen to my own 19-year-old daughter. She had been living with my sister, as I was out of the state. All at once she disappeared, and I came home to find out where she was, but could not get to see her.

One day I sent my son to the place where she worked, to find out why she never came to see me. I shall never forget the answer he brought back to me. It was, "Mother, she is in a hospital. She has a baby boy."

Oh! Will I ever forget that night, or the long days of grief that followed? I sat up all night and cried. My little girl! To think that she could have brought such disgrace on me, and on the good children of my sisters! Oh! How could I ever lift up my head? I felt worse for the rest of the family than for myself, or I saw how badly they felt. God help Rose's mother! I know just how she felt.

WOULDN'T GIVE CHILD UP

Well, finally I went to the hospital to see my girl. I took her in my arms. I said, "My little girl, come home. Give up your baby. No one will ever know. Let me put it away—give it to someone." I shall never forget the look that came into her eyes—like a wild animal, as she held her little son. She said, "I shall never give him up. I can't, Mother. I don't want to come home, if I can't take him." I was wild. I ran out of the hospital, talking to myself. I swore that she would never come home with him.

My husband, who is my girl's stepfather, was away on a business trip. How was I going to look him in the face, and tell him of this dreadful disgrace? I did not know. But I did tell him, when he came home and he asked me how she was. I told him I never wanted to see her again.

"Mother," he said, "you are wrong. Now is the time she needs us to lift her up and give her a chance. She has always been a good girl. Let her keep the baby. She is your little girl."

So he went after her, and brought her home, baby and all.

I didn't try to hide the baby. I told my friends it was her child. No one seemed to say a thing. They only felt sorry for her. I kept the baby for a month, but the shock of the whole thing was too much for me. I got sick, so my husband took me away.

She put the baby in a home, where it is well taken care of, and she sees it each week. When I am well again, we will take it home.

THANKFUL NOW

I never mention the affair to my girl. She is back at the place where she worked. But, thank God, we have her baby. When I looked into the little face, he looked at me as much as to say "You wanted to send me away!" Thank God I never did it! If I had, I would have been haunted, wondering if he was being treated right. If only Rose's mother would look at it like this, she would feel better.

I have come now to where I don't care what the world thinks. A human life was at stake. Why should such little children suffer for what they had nothing to do with? Why shouldn't they be loved, and taken care of, and given a chance?

I know how Rose's mother feels, but let people talk if they want to. Let her try to forget Rose's mistake, and give her and the baby a chance. She will never have to feel, then, that she put an innocent baby out of sight because she was afraid of what people might say. And may God lift the sorrow from her heart, as he is lifting it from mine. J. D.

There's how one mother stood steady under a blow more bitter than death. I don't know how that letter makes you feel, but it has made the world seem a lovelier place to me. It has renewed my faith in all womankind. You're a big, brave woman, Mrs. J. D.!

Fay King Decries Exaggerated Emphasis Put Upon Appearance

By FAY KING

Lately I read an item which interested me. It told how beauty parlor workers are contributing marcels and manicures to office girls out of work so that they could more easily secure a position.

This is, indeed, a commendable kindness on the part of the hairdressers and manicurists, but it also brings out the undue emphasis now placed upon personal appearance.

It seems that to look neat and nice in a plain way is not enough these days. A girl must appear faultlessly groomed and fashionably gowned.

Competence and cleanliness should be all that counts in the business world. To budget out for personal enhancement must cause many a girl to stint herself in the more important things like food and lodgings.

Heart of a Wife -:- Continuation of Love's Reawakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge Rebellious About Not Joining Rescue Party

While I make no claim to being psychic, something outside of myself seemed to possess me as I heard Helena ask Lillian to "promise me—" and Lillian's query as to what the promise was to be. Even before Helena's pitifully weary voice went on; I anticipated almost her very words—sensed them in my brain, before my ears heard them.

"Promise you won't leave me till Sam and Carolyn come back. Promise, and I'll let them put me to sleep. If you don't, I won't. I can't. I'll die first!"

Her voice was rising hysterically now, and I could imagine the glance that Lillian sent her husband and the steady, loving, helpful look she received in return. And then, as is always Lillian's way, she crushed down her own need to administer to that of another, and put her foot upon the first step of what I knew would be a Via Crucis for her.

"Yes, dearest, I'll promise you that I won't leave you till they come back, unless you send me yourself."

I do not think Helena heard the last words, for Lillian's voice lowered as she uttered them, almost as if she were afraid to add them. There was utter silence for an instant, then Helena said, as might a child:

"All right. I'll keep quiet. But you must hold my hand every minute."

SORRY FOR LILLIAN

There was quick movement in the chamber now, and once a slight little cry, as the needle jabbed Helena's arm. But I could guess with what a firm, tender clasp Lillian was holding her friend, and the hot tears rushed to my eyes as I thought what that promise must have cost Marion's mother. To stay quiescent, tethered by the side of this sick, hysteria-ridden woman, while the expedition to rescue her daughter went away without her—I could imagine her agony.

Then my anger turned against myself, for I knew full well that I was using Lillian even more cruelly than was Helena. Carolyn's mother had at least the excuse of being hysterical with grief, not responsible for what she was doing, when she demanded that promise, so terrible for Lillian to make. But I, strong, with no personal grief gnawing at my heart, had put it out of my own power to go to Lillian and say, "I will go with the rescue party, so that if Marion cannot have you with her, she at least will have me."

GETS LONG DISTANCE CALL

In that moment I almost hated Dicky for exacting that promise from me, and when Helena, after a little, yielded to the hypodermic and fell asleep, I waited only to give Hugh's message to Harry, then, pleading a headache—for Lillian insisted upon keeping to the letter of her promise and staying in Helena's room—I went to my own room and fought out with myself the question of whether I should keep the promise I made to Dicky, or break it.

My mental battle went on all the afternoon. Rarely have I spent such bitter hours. Before I had come to any decision, however, the telephone rang and when I answered it the operator said:

"Is this Mrs. Graham, Mrs. Richard Graham?"

"Yes."

"The party calling wishes to know if your home is in Sag Harbor."

"Yes, yes." My heart began to pound affrightedly, as it always does at a telephone call whose source I do not know. "Is this a local or long-distance call?"

"Long distance." Then, as in one second I visioned the farmhouse burned down and the children killed, she added "from Newark."

"Newark!" I echoed. "I know no one in Newark; at least no one who knows I am here."

"Will you take the call?" she repeated, a bit impatiently.

"Yes." And then there came to my ears a sing-song voice, unmistakably Chinese.

"This Missee Graham?"

-:- Hints for the Household -:-

When you want to iron dry clothes in a hurry and have not time to dampen them a good plan is to sprinkle your ironing cloth liberally with water. As you iron the dry clothes over it the steam will rise and dampen them sufficiently and evenly. It is a much better way than dampening the clothes.

It is a good plan to knit silk into the heels of stockings before they are worn. This trebles the life of the stockings without making them bulky.

Polished furniture will take on a more brilliant polish if it is first rubbed with a cloth wrung out in a mixture of equal parts of vinegar and water.

Contract Bridge -:- HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

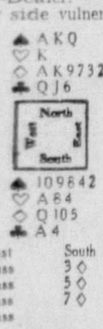
A Grand Slam Rubber

The increased bonus for Grand Slams under the new laws unquestionably has measurably increased the number of Grand Slams bid, as the very human desire to realize to the utmost the possibility of a hand is an urge to take the risk of losing a Small Slam for the greater rewards of the Grand Slam.

Even in these days, however, it is rare for a partnership to have hands which justify the bidding and assure the making of Grand Slams on two consecutive hands. Such was the happy experience, however, of Mrs. Anita W. Tipping and Mr. J. M. Magruder in a recent Rubber game in New Orleans, in which they bid and made Grand Slams on two consecutive hands and thereby made a 4800-point rubber.

The first hand with its bidding was:

North—Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



North	East	South	West
2 ◇	Pass	3 ◇	Pass
4 ◇	Pass	5 ◇	Pass
6 ◇	Pass	7 ◇	Pass
Pass	Pass

The bidding appears rather super-cautious at some stages, but all is well that ends well, and, of course, the contract was made without difficulty.

The only lead that could have caused any particular uneasiness would have been the opening of a club.

The next hand with its bidding was:

East—Dealer.

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	5 ♡	Pass
7 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

The bidding of the second hand is really very fine. When North fails to bid four notrump and chooses instead to bid five hearts, South at once draws the fine negative inference that, although North has forced, his hand does not contain the Ace of clubs; otherwise, with such strong heart support, he would have bid four notrump. Thus North must have a very strong hand aside from the club suit, which, so far as South is concerned, will probably be a duplication of values. The failure to bid four notrump clearly pointed the way to a safe Grand Slam contract.

TODAY'S QUESTION

South opens with a bid of one spade, to which North responds with two hearts. What should South now bid, holding the following hand?

♠ A Q 8 5 2 ♡ Q 4 ◇ Q 7 ♣ A 5 4 2

Answer—Two notrump. The hand contains enough strength so that partner should be given an opportunity to rebid. The spade suit is not strong enough for a rebid and there is not adequate trump support for hearts.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Treat Nose and Throat Infections

Catarrh of the nose and throat is common in all seasons and climates. The symptoms of catarrh follow an irritation or infection of the lining membrane of the throat. It is ordinarily spoken of by the physician as acute or chronic rhinitis.

Dr. Copeland

The germs which cause colds and sore throats also cause rhinitis. The sufferer complains of stuffiness in the nose and dryness in the throat. This is followed by a "running nose," mucus droppings in the throat, difficulty in clearing the nose and throat and sore throat. Hoarseness may be present.

These symptoms may persist from a few hours to a few days. In some cases they last for three or four days.

The complications are due to the germs responsible for the original infection. They become lodged in the mucous membranes, particularly in the nasal sinuses which open into the nose. Sinusitis, as this inflammation is called, is often a stubborn and difficult ailment to cure.

Chronic nasal catarrh or chronic rhinitis is the continuation of acute catarrh. It is more difficult to cure, persisting for a long time. It is usually associated with some degree of infection of the sinuses. The throat is dry, painful and difficult to clear. The glands of the neck may become enlarged, particularly in children.

Neglected rhinitis may lead to other serious disturbances besides sinus disease. Rheumatism, neuritis, heart disease, intestinal and nervous diseases, may be traced to catarrh of the nose and throat. Never neglect this trouble.

If it persists, a careful examination of the nose, throat and sinuses is necessary. A crooked nasal septum, enlargement of the bones of the nose or other deformities of nasal structures, should be corrected whenever possible. When there is a failure to promote drainage, serious infections of the nose and sinus cavities are more apt to occur.

If you are susceptible to nasal infections avoid congested meeting places, so far as you reasonably can. Proper heating and ventilation of the home are essential. Avoid sudden changes in temperature, chilling and exposure to cold and dampness.

Include in your diet a liberal supply of fresh fruits, vegetables, cereals, cream, milk, butter and eggs. These foods contain certain valuable substances which aid the body to combat germs of the common cold, and nasal catarrh.

Gift of a Photograph

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please tell me what is correct to write on a photograph of myself which I am going to give to a young man friend of mine? I have known him for four months and he has asked me for a picture. He does not live near me but has been to see me and corresponds with me.

1—Should I or should I not autograph the picture?

2—Should I get a frame for it? L.

1—Personally, since you do not seem to know the young man very well, I think that it would be in better taste for you not to autograph this photograph. Especially if he did not ask you to do this.

However, the autographing of a photograph is such a personal thing, such a matter of our own taste, that you will have to decide for yourself.

If you do decide to autograph it, I suggest that you write the most simple of inscriptions. This is the one I most recommend:

To Bob
Dorothy

Or:

With friendly greetings to Bob
Dorothy

2—No, do not have the photograph framed.

Bridal Costume

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it proper for a divorcee to wear any sort of veil or Juliet cap? If not, what would you advise as a proper headdress?

D.

It is not proper for the bride-for-the-second-time to wear a bridal veil. Since the wedding will be an informal one—second marriages usually are, and correctly—the bride will probably wear a hat. The hat can be of any degree of formality or informality, to harmonize with the rest of the costume.

PITT BOXERS ENGAGE DUKES

SPORT COMMENT

By James J. Long

Mason Claims Waddell. Too Many Floor Styles.
Buc Hurlers Questioned. Grid Proposal a Balance.

SCHAAF VICTORY WOULD HELP BOXING

IT WILL BE a good thing for the boxing game if Ernie Schaaf defeats Primo Carnera tonight. This because the promoters have announced that they will send the winner against Jack Sharkey in June for the title. As they could hardly hope to use Schaaf, inasmuch as Sharkey is Ernie's manager and it would be difficult to make ring followers accept it as being on the level, their only chance for a successful June show depends on Carnera's winning tonight.

Primo Carnera

Knowing that many fans, justly or not, would view a victory for Primo with suspicion. They would believe the thing had been fixed for Carnera to win, in order to provide an opponent for Sharkey and save the June match. The game would get another black eye. It's a tough spot for the voluminous Venetian, for even if he wins on his merits there will be plenty of places where he won't get any credit for it. It will be charged that the fight was in the bag. It will be forgotten that Schaaf is an in-and-outer. An off night for Ernie will be called a lay-down. The best interests of the ring sport will be served by a win for Schaaf, and on comparative form, if Ernie is normal, that's the way it ought to result.

THE DISCOVERY OF Rube Waddell has been credited at various times to Frank Haller, the late Howard Risher and several others. Red Mason writes from Chicago to put in a claim of his own. He says that, whiel trainer of the Pirates in the '9's, he found Waddell.

"I picked a team called the Pittsburgh Reserves for games in Mars, Butler, Evans City and other places," Mason writes. "I had among other players Jim Wall, his brother Dick, Jim McKeever, Pat Callahan and Gene Border. In Evans City, Waddell pitched against us, with a man named Jim Brady catching him.

"RUBE FANNED ABOUT 20 of our men, and I came back to Pittsburgh telling of the wonder I had run across. I got Rube to come down to Exposition Park one morning soon afterward, and he started to pitch to the various players, among them Connie Mack.

"The players were frightened by Waddell's speed and wildness, and refused to take a chance at the plate. Pat Donovan, the captain of the Pirates, then sent Rube out to center field to chase fungoes.

"ANOTHER TIME, ON a trip up the Allegheny Valley, we were held up by a small wreck. I jumped off the train, and, while standing at the station in Braeburn, I saw a big husky fellow catching balls pitched by a companion. I walked over and talked with the big catcher and he told me his name was Ossie Schreckengost. I persuaded him to come down that same week for a trial. He and his father arrived shortly before game time one afternoon while the Pirates were warming up. They were riding bicycles and wearing knickers and I got the man on the carriage gate to let them in. They rode right out on the diamond and around the bases, to the great amusement of the spectators. In later years Waddell and Schreckengost became a famous battery for the Athletics."

Pat Malone

BACK FROM MIAMI, Max Carey reports that Paul Waner, Freddie Lindstrom and Steve Swetonic, of the Pirates, are playing golf down there with Pat Malone, Cub pitcher, and Umpire Bill Klem. "Lindy and Waner are telling Malone that the Pirates are going to win the pennant, and you should hear Pat get back at them," Carey says.

"'No pitchin', no pitchin', and you can't win without it,' Malone tells them. And I agree with Pat," Max adds. "The Bucs are going to have a strong infield and outfield and lots of batting power, but it looks as though they lack pitching strength."

IN CONTINUALLY HARPING about what they call the weakness of the Pittsburgh pitching staff, men connected with rival National League clubs may be trying only to whistle away their fears. If they weren't plenty worried about the Pirates and their possibilities they wouldn't be giving them so much of their expert attention.

Home fans see no cause for fretting about a mound staff that, with a less powerful team behind it than it will have this year, was good enough last season to come within four box scores of the pennant, despite the fact that Swetonic was lost for a month and Meine didn't start a game until June 4.

WHY ISN'T BASKETBALL an Olympic sport when there are 20,000,000 people playing it in the world today—in France, Italy, Japan, China, Persia, India, Sweden, Germany and 20 other countries? John (Chick) Murray, veteran Eastern pro player and official, thinks it's because of lack of co-operation among basketball men. "All those countries got the game from us," he said, "through the Y. M. C. A., through the American soldiers going to the Philippines, through our German Army of Occupation, through the inter-allied games at Paris in 1919.

"NOW THEY ALL look to us as the mother country in basketball. They look to us for decisions and guidance as to the proper way to play the game, and we can't agree even among ourselves.

"The game as played in Pittsburgh is different from that played in New York. It's one thing here and another in Peoria. How are we going to guide other people? It's time to get together and have the game played the same everywhere."

THE CHALLENGE HURLED at Irving Jaffee by Bobby McLean, while the latter was appearing at Duquesne Garden this winter, for a match to decide the world professional speed championship in ice skating, may lead to an early test between the rival fliers.

Elmer Layden

William J. Richards, manager of the six-day skating race to be held in Syracuse starting February 19, has entered into negotiations with Jaffee and hopes to sign him for a series of championship contests with McLean as side features of the long grind.

FOOTBALL MEN ARE agreed that if the rule makers, at their three-day meeting opening today in Philadelphia, adopt the two more important changes recommended by Elmer Layden and the other members of the coaches' committee, the effects will be equally divided. One will help the offense, and the other will aid the defense. Bringing the ball in to a 10-yard point when it is nearer than that to the sideline will give the attacking team a lift by saving it from wasting a down through a step-out play and enabling it to make full use of its four downs. Keeping ineligible men on the line of scrimmage on a forward pass until the ball is thrown is a brake on the offensive side and helps the defense. The latter will be able to tell, by watching the attacking line from tackle to tackle, whether a pass or a running play is coming. In addition, it will prevent a back, who has been hemmed in by defensive players, from throwing a quick-thinking forward pass to prevent a loss when the original play was to carry the ball.

PERRY CLASHES WITH LANGLEY; SOUTH IDLE

By JULIUS LEVIN

A full schedule of games is offered the followers of high school basketball in the City League and the W. P. I. A. L. this afternoon and tonight.

In the City League, only one of the two undefeated leaders will be seen in action, South High, setting the pace in Section I with eight successive victories, enjoying a day of rest.

Perry High, leader in Section II, also with eight straight victories, will invade Langley High School to oppose the Sheridan passers in what looms as a real test for the revised Perry quintet.

LEADERS FACE BATTLE

Coach Chester A. Smith has been experimenting with the Perry combine as a result of the loss of Arthur Gels at center and Jimmy Manning at guard. While his team has continued its winning streak since the graduation of this pair of sterling performers, the battle with Langley should prove the real test.

Connelley Trade plays at Schenley, Peabody invades Westinghouse and Allderdice goes to Fifth Avenue. Allderdice has one of the best teams in Section I despite the fact it has been defeated three times and will prove a tough opponent for the Uptowners. Allderdice did not lose a man from the regular squad in the February graduations.

SCOTT, RANKIN CLASH

Leaders in all sections of the W. P. I. A. L. likewise see action tonight against important rivals. A fine program is offered in the junior leagues and with a flock of excellent attractions in non-league ranks, fans in the district are assured of some sterling battles.

One of the tip-top games in the W. P. I. A. L. brings together Rankin and Scott in Section VIII. The rival coaches, Jock Rosenberg, of Rankin, and Johnny Reed, of Scott, attended the pro game at Motor Square Garden last night and engaged in quite an argument between halves as to which team should be the favorite. Both foresaw defeat for their charges by wide margins.

In Section VI Ford City faces a test in Freeport. McKeesport may cause Homestead trouble in Section VII and in Section XIV. Burgettstown and Hickory meet in a feature tussle.

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: THE FASTEST PIANIST—By diligent application, Aaron Levy, of San Francisco, has mastered what he calls the arpeggio, or 10-fingered chromatic technique, of fast piano playing, and now plays the astounding total of 15,000 notes a minute—250 a second. His a-c arpeggio, for instance, is: c, e flat, e, g flat, g, b, and c, augmented into 10-fingered chords. He uses them 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6 to a count in any key, major or minor. In order to produce the 250 notes a second, he plays a chorus of 32 bars in less than 30 seconds. In one of these bars he plays a 24-chord 10-fingered chromatic, or the arpeggio, which makes 240 notes to the bar in less than a second. Levy, who lives at 4845 California street, San Francisco, has had his high-speed playing checked and verified by the officials of the Musicians Union, Local 6, of his city. ALUMINUM HEAVIER THAN CONCRETE—The weight of a cubic foot block of aluminum is 169½ pounds, while the same size block of stone concrete weighs from 145 to 150 pounds.

TOMORROW: ABRAHAM LINCOLN'S COUSINS

CURRY LINEUP SHAKEUP DUE

By TOM BIRKS

Radical changes in the makeup of the Curry team is expected on Sunday, when the Keystoners clash with the Cleveland Slavias in the second round of the national open challenge cup at Greenlee Field.

Manager Johnny Bruce, of Curry, was disappointed with the showing of the team in the national amateur cup game and figures that despite the absence of Buff Donnelli and Mike Bookie, the Keystone outfit should have beaten Moon Run.

Bruce will have Bookie and Donnelli back in the lineup on Sunday, at inside right and center forward, but it is likely a change will be made at inside left.

Nip Cimerolli does not work either with Donnelli or Molly to advantage and checks many of the brilliant runs Molly would execute if given the ball at the right moment.

The hard, snowy field will help the Slavia team, with its fast, scientific movements, which means that Powell and Kirk, the halfbacks, will have to keep close to the inside men.

Cyle, the former Heidelberg star fullback, will be back in the game. Cyle was brilliant against the Shamrocks, giving one of the finest fullback exhibitions seen around her in many moons.

The game will be called at 2:30 sharp.

Pillot, Texan, Wins Flyer Cup Shoot

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—N. V. Pillot, 29, of Houston, Tex., won the individual flyer challenge cup title at the interstate trapshooting tournament by defeating Fred Ford, of Detroit, in a shootoff yesterday.

Both shot 24 out of 25 targets in the regular event. In the extra event, Ford missed his first and fifth shots, Pillot winning, 4 to 3.

Fee-Dale LaBarba Here, May Stay Awhile

By HARRY KECK, Sports Editor.

Looking more like a movie hero than a boxer with many years of campaigning behind him, Fidel La Barba, who first gained fame as an Olympic Games boxer, along with Jackie Fields, and then went on to win the world flyweight championship and resign it to enter college, and then dropped out of college after a year to return to the ring, and now is planning to return to college, is in town marking time for his bout with Mose Butch, local featherweight, in Motor Square Garden next Monday night.

That's a long opening sentence, but it gives you a picture of Fiddle all in one bunch. You'll find another picture of him elsewhere in the sports section, along with his manager, George Blake, the fellow who coached him from his kid days and also started Fields. Blake, by the way, also rates as one of our leading referees. He handled the Max Schmeling-Young Stribling world heavyweight title fight in Cleveland a few years ago.

ALSO CALLED 'FIDDLE'

According to Blake, all of his intimates call La Barba "Fiddle." Sometimes they call him the Fiddling Barber because it sounds something like Fidel La Barba. As a matter of fact, the proper pronunciation of Fidel is Fee-dale, and it means fidelity or faithfulness.

This is Fiddle's first visit in Pittsburgh, and he may stay on here for a while if he clicks. He is headed for his native Los Angeles, but he is not in any particular hurry about getting there. If he doesn't stay over here he'll drop off in Chicago, Kansas City, Denver and other points. Accompanying him is Pete Sanstol, the corking good bantamweight, of New York, who hopes to clean up the Arizmendis, Panchos and all of the other little fellows in California.

TO SEE COLLEGE MATCH

Tonight, La Barba will attend the college boxing match between Pitt and Duquesne in the Pitt Stadium Pavilion as the guest of Coach Joe Orsini, of Pitt, and he may referee an exhibition bout or two. This afternoon, he'll work out in the Motor Square Garden gymnasium, and he'll also drill there tomorrow and Sunday. If his show draws well and the promoters can dig up somebody else to fight him, he'll stay around and get the feel of our town and remain with us indefinitely.

Britons Dominate Squash Title Play

HAVERFORD, Pa., Feb. 10.—(AP.)—Invading English squash racquets stars have captured three places in the semi-final brackets of the national women's championship tourney, one of them eliminating the defending American titleholder.

Only Ruth Hall, sure-stroking Merion, Pa., racquet-wielder, carried the American colors into the round-of-four yesterday, as Susan Noel, 20-year-old British titlist, and her countrywomen, Anne Lytton-Milbanke and Cicely Fenwick routed the ranking United States players.

GIANTS, NATS SIGN STARS

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—Contracts have been flowing so steadily into the business offices of the New York Giants and Washington Senators that these world series opponents of 1924 now are doing their countting on the basis of players not signed.

The Giants' unsigned list likewise dwindled to five as Pitcher Herman Bell and Second Baseman John LaBorne swung into line.S till unsigned are Hal Schumacher, Len Koenecke, Sam Leslie, Fritz Lieber and Homer Peel.

The Boston Red Sox added Outfielder Tom Winsett to their list of contented hirelings. Winsett was farmed out to Buffalo of the International League last season and hit .357.

Thirteen men will form the first squad when the National League Champion Cubs leave for Santa Catalina Island February 20.

Of the group, only Manager Charley Grimm and Capt. Woody English are other than batterymen. The list will include catchers Gabby Hartnett and Zack Taylor, veteran pitchers Pat Malone, Guy Bush and Lon Warneke, and recruit hurlers Roy Henshaw, Le Roy Herrmann, Buck Newsom, Byrl Richmond, and Lynn Nelson, the latter joining the caravan at Kansas City. Carroll Yerkes, southpaw who finished the season with the Cubs last year, already has started westward.

LOCAL PASSERS SET FOR FRAYS TOMORROW

By JESS CARVER

The collegians shift their sport activity from basketball to boxing once again tonight as Pitt and Duquesne pit their ring warriors against each other in an Intercollegiate Conference match in the Stadium Pavilion. Beside the thrill that will go with a victory over a city rival, undisputed possession of third place goes with a triumph in the match.

It becomes rather difficult to get a line on the respective abilities of the two squads. Both sport a champion, Freddie Moore, of the Dukes, being the reigning 145-pound king and Jack Shricker, of Pitt, holding the title in the 155-pound division. Both squads have met Temple, the Panthers winning their match, 4 to 3, while the Dukes lost by an identical count.

However, since Pitt beat the Owls, the Blue and Gold has been on the old skids, while the Dukes have shown improved form.

PITT LINEUP SHIFTED

Coach Joe Orsini, the Panther director of jab and hook, has shifted his lineup for the match. He's supplanted Herb Pearle with Junge in the 115-pound class and Red Spiegel with Santicola in the 145-pound division. Coach Joe hardly did Santicola a favor in putting him in there with Moore. The latter is a devastating puncher with plenty of experience.

There is little to choose between Junge and Pearle, save that the former appears to be slightly more aggressive than little Herb. Both need experience and the fact that Junge is fighting Speedy Vitulla tonight doesn't mean that he's a fixture on the team.

Pitt's captain, Francis (Little Tough Guy) Seigal, returns to the wars tonight as a 165-pounder and will throw his left hook at Chapple Chappelle, of the Dukes. The Pitt leader was out of the early bouts due to some important business with the Golden Panther football team in California and some more important dates in various and sundry university classrooms.

Following is the prospective lineup of bouts, the first of which will get under way at 8:15 o'clock:

115 pounds—Vitula, Duquesne vs. Junge, Pitt.
125 pounds—Gibb, Duquesne vs. Gambatese, Pitt.
135 pounds—Ganson or Ehrlich, Duquesne vs. Giangaiffi, Pitt.
145 pounds—Moore, Duquesne vs. Santicola Pitt.
155 pounds—Ramora Duquesne vs. Schricker, Pitt.
165 pounds—Chappala, Duquesne vs. Seigel, Pitt.
175 pounds—Avington, Duquesne vs. ——, Pitt.

PASSERS GO WEST

Two other Pitt varsity teams leave town tonight for competition in the East and Mid-West. The basketballers, seeking their eighth victory in a row and their second of the season over Notre Dame, face the Ramblers in South Bend tomorrow night. Pat Corr and his swimmers, unbeaten leaders and defending champions in the Eastern Intercollegiate Swimming Association, are in Lancaster today for a meet with Franklin and Marshall and tomorrow will take on the University of Delaware in Newark, Del.

Dukes' Stars Out

Coach Chick Davies, of the Dukes, is resigned to the loss of three of his regulars for the game with West Virginia in the Duquesne gym tomorrow night and today will give his revised varsity lineup a final drill. With Reiter, Feldman and Birch apparently doomed to mere fidgeting about on the bench tomorrow, Frank Serany, Capt. Bunk McGeever and Jim MacDougal have been advanced to starting positions.

Capt. McGeever, who has had a lengthy sojourn on the bench, will perform at one forward, in place of Feldman, with MacDougal taking Birch's place. Serany will replace Reiter at guard, teaming with the stellar and steady Dudey Moore. Len Brenner is to stay in the lineup at center.

The Mountaineers, who looked so decidedly unimpressive against Pitt on their first visit to Pittsburgh, will make tomorrow's stop here the last of an extended road trip and the fourth for this week, during which time they've won exactly two out of five games. The West Virginians have been taken by Georgetown, N. Y. U. and Temple in a row.

Carnegie Tech's passers, idle since losing to Notre Dame last week, return to action tomorrow against Western Reserve, in Cleveland, and will leave early tomorrow morning for the Lake City.

German Bike Stars Hold Slight Lead

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—Four teams were bunched for the lead at the 25-hour mark of the six-day international bike race here. The leaders had covered 438 miles and 9 laps.

Charles Winter and Tony Schaller, the German team, held a slight advantage in points over the three other leaders. They were Bartel and Saetta, the Bohemian team; Petri and Zach, Swiss, and Van Slambrouck and Rys, Belgian.

WIN OVER SCHAAF TO BRING CARNERA CHANCE AT TITLE

PRIMO BATTLES BOSTON HEAVY IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—Primo Carnera will be summoned before a court of fistic justice tonight to show cause why he should be given a chance at Jack Sharkey's heavyweight championship in June.

Schaaf has been promised nothing but his share in the receipts. The big Boston blond is in an extremely unfortunate position so far as any title chance is concerned. His contract is owned jointly by Sharkey and Johnny Buckley and the fight fans, long-suffering though they have been, hardly would stand for a match between Sharkey and Schaaf.

BETTING ODDS SHIFT

Because of this, there have been reports widely circulated and vehemently denied that Primo might be aided to victory in the interests of the contemplated return match between the Italian and Sharkey. The various "angles" of the match also have been well reflected in the betting. Schaaf ruled a 2-to-1 choice over the Venetian all week, but quotations last night were reported at 6 to 5, with Carnera on the long end.

Schaaf, apparently fully recovered from his slump of last summer, when he dropped decisions to Max Baer, Stanley Poreda and Unknown Winston, has been broadcasting confidence on long and short waves. After knocking out Winston in six rounds early this year, Schaaf returned to the Garden a few weeks ago and disposed of Poreda in the same number of heats. He was an impressive looking fighter that night, big and strong, a powerful puncher.

SCHAFF OUTWEIGHED

Although he will be outweighed 50 pounds by Carnera, Schaaf is so ruggedly built that none concede the Italian a chance of knocking him out. Of the two, Schaaf is by far the harder hitter and, on form, should win.

Carnera has done comparatively little ring work since Sharkey gave him a sound whipping in the fall of 1931. In recent months he has scored victories over King Levinsky and K. O. Christner.

The semi-final of 10 rounds will bring together Adolph Heuser, of Germany, and Harry Ebbets, of Freeport, N. Y., the winner to meet Maxie Rosenbloom, of New York, on February 24 for the light-heavyweight title Maxie holds in this state.

LaBarba, Pilot Laugh Off Chilly Reception

FIDEL LaBARBA — GEORGE BLAKE

A couple of residents of sunny California, here for LaBarba's fight with Mose Butch at Motor Square Garden Monday night, Fidel and Manager Blake got a kick out of the frigid weather that greeted them when they stepped off their train from New York. The weather was a fake, they agreed, after running into warm Pittsburgh hospitality. This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

SCHOOL SWIM TEAMS WIN

The Schenley and Turtle Creek High School swimming teams were returned victors in dual meets yesterday.

Schenley defeated Munhall, 43 to 21, while Turtle Creek avenged a former defeat at the hands of Kiski by beating the prep school splashers. It was Turtle Creek's eighth victory of the season out of nine starts. The summaries:

SCHENLEY-MUNHALL

50-yard free style—Won by L. Crame, Schenley; H. Crame, Schenley, second; Mossbacher, Munhall, third. Time, :27.5.

Schissler Denies Joining Grid Pros

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—Paul J. Schissler, recently resigned Oregon State College football coach, today squelched reports that he would become manager and coach of the Boston Braves professional football club. Schissler said:

George Marshall, owner of the Braves, is a personal friend of mine. He asked me to stop off at the University of Santa Clara to offer a contract to Hands Slavich, whom he was anxious to sign. That is my sole connection in the matter. I am not interested in professional football coaching at this time."

GOODWIN WINS WAY TO FINAL

PALM BEACH, Fla., Feb. 10.—(AP.)—Tommy Goodwin, Monroe, N. Y., youngster who is the only early favorite to survive in the annual South Florida golf championship, and William H. Hyde, of Ridgeway, Pa., have gained the final round.

Goodwin had an easy time disposing of W. B. Langford, Chicago, yesterday, 6 and 5.

Hyde, whose steady string of victories has been the surprise of the tournament, turned in a 2 and 1 win over C. A. Edwards, of Hempstead, L. I.

C. W. Scott, of Pittsburgh, teed off this morning in the Title consolation flight final round. He is opposing R. C. Maxwell, of Princeton, N. J.

Metcalfe Certain W. Va. Games Entry

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Feb. 10.—(AP.)—Warmer weather today cheered athletic authorities of West Virginia University and they believe nearly all of the 325 athletes entered in the fifth annual indoor track and field games tomorrow will be present as the first event is called at 2 p. m.

Ralph Metcalfe, Negro sprinter from Marquette University, and Capt. Jack Tierney, also a sprinter, will be here for the competition.

H. A. Stansbury, director of athletics at West Virginia, talked to Conrad Jennings, the Golden Avalanche director, over long-distance telephone this morning and received definite assurance that the two Marquette stars will be here.

Metcalfe and Tierney will arrive tomorrow morning by train.

Gibby and Honus Relate Colorful Tales of Past World Series Battles

—By CHARLES J. DOYLE—

The story behind the story often packs a big thrill. George Gibson, Pirate pilot, unfolded one of these yesterday as he beguiled himself with some written chronicles of the 1909 world series between the Pirates and Tigers, a set of games which brought Pittsburgh its first world championship honors.

Gibby's expression broke into a smile the while he poured through an account of the final game of that series as contained in a baseball guide. The contest, played in Detroit, brought a convincing victory to the Buccos and decided the emblem of supremacy.

Bobby Byrne, star thirdsacker of the Buccos, was carried off the field of battle with a broken leg as a penalty for the winning of the important engagement. The little book mentioned this fact, but it gave no inkling of the events that led up to that injury. And the memory of those happenings are what brought the smile to Gibson's countenance. Quoth Gibby:

COUPLE OF PLAY BOYS

"Little Bobby was trying to give George Moriarty a receipt when he broke his leg. Morry always was a fighting player—he's the same fearless fellow who tangled with a flock of White Sox players last summer when they hopped on him for his decisions.

"Well, anyhow, some of our boys had the idea that George was carrying his fighting spirit a bit too far. It was hinted that he intentionally stepped onto the feet of Big Bill Abstein with his sharp spikes. Now when you started anything around boys like Fred Clarke and Bobby Byrne, you had a battle on your hands.

"Bobby worked his way to second base and he decided to try to steal third in order to pay off on Morry. His dive, feet first, probably was more severe than he expected it to be and his spikes cut a gash in George's leg big enough to require about a dozen stitches, but when George fell he landed on one of Bobby's legs and it snapped.

"We had to call Tommy Leach into the infield and Ol' Ham Hyatt went to center. Moriarty tried to stay in the game, but he followed Byrne to a doctor. Yes, sir, the boys were fighting for that game!

BOUQUET FOR FAN

Honus Wagner, an outstanding star, in the distant fracas with the Jungaleers, tells of an incident of the 1925 series with the Senators that reflects the unselfish characteristics of the "Flying Dutchman." Wagner did not give this out for publication, but it is worth retelling.

Honus was seated near John McGraw during one of the great fights at Forbes Field. The fans were so wrought up over the battles, by the way, they took everything that was loose in the Oakland Orchard for souveniers. Foul balls batted into the stands were highly prized possessions.

Somebody near Honus caught a foul, and another fan, who did not recognize Wagner (he must have been from the tall and uncut sections), declared he would give $25 for the ball. Wagner advised the stranger that if he were there the next day, Honus would try to get him one at actual cost. So before the contest started on the succeeding afternoon, Wagner secured a new ball, induced every Pirate to autograph the sphere which he presented to the wild-eyed fan. The latter tossed a 10-spot at Wagner, but Honus made it bounce back.

One enterprising fan dug out the home plate by the roots when the final battle ended. An hour later he was raffling it off in Oakland.

Mrs. Hill Choice In Tourney Final

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Feb. 10.—(AP.)—Mrs. Opal S. Hill, of Kansas City, and Miss Bea Gottlieb, of New York, have advanced to the final round of the Bayshore-La Gorce women's golf championship tournament here.

Miss Hill defeated Miss Kathryn Braggan, East Orange, N. J., yesterday, 3 and 2, while Miss Gottlieb required a 19-hole struggle to defeat Miss Ariel Vilas, Chicago, in the semi-finals.

The Kansas City star stood out as the favorite to win the championship in the final match against Miss Gottlieb today. Last week she captured the Miami-Biltmore women's championship by defeating a fellow-westerner, Mrs. Estelle Drennan, of Tulsa, Okla.

PLAYERS SWAPPED

DAYTON, O., Feb. 10.—(AP.)—Ducky Holmes, owner of the Dayton baseball club, of the Central League, has traded Stanley Combs, southpaw outfielder, to Nashville of the Southern Association, for Len (Dutch) Shires, a second baseman.

The undefeated I. K. S. basketball team will have Mingo Junction as its attraction at the I. K. S. tonight. The home team has won 21 straight games.

LA BARBA MAY STAY HERE

British champion, beat him there recently, with Fidel subbing on short notice for the Keed, the setback killed this rematch, at least for the present, and Watson and Chocolate will battle for the crown probably next month. Coast promoters may be able to lure Chocolate to California for a bout with Fidel during the summer, and the match really may draw better there than in the East.

WOULD BE JOURNALIST

La Barba isn't kidding about finishing his college course. He's going in for economics and possibly journalism. As he put it:

"I did think seriously of becoming a banker or a broker, but I suppose I might as well learn the newspaper business and take the job of one of you fellows."

Manager Blake said Pittsburgh is regarded as one of the garden spots of boxing by managers all over the country. He was amazed to learn that three clubs have been operating here weekly and that Ted Yarosz and Eddie (Kid) Wolfe drew well over $3,000 recently and that other shows have hit over the $2,000 mark. He said that, aside from Madison Square Garden, the clubs in the vicinity of New York have come to regard a $1,000 house as something to cheer about.

TELLS OF WATSON BOUT

La Barba said he had one of his bad nights against Watson. He said he thought he was going to win by a knockout in an early round, but Watson weathered the storm and then got going with a body attack that carried away the fight. He was interested in learning that his opponent here, Mose Butch, is an Italian, like himself. He thought Mose was Jewish. He hopes it will be a good fight.

Koubek, Wallace Gain Handball Final

Frank Koubek and Regis Wallace, an unattached pair, will engage Pat Marcin and E. Y. Poling, of the Downtown Y. M. C. A., in the final round of the novice A. M. A. doubles handball tournament at the Keystone Club Sunday afternoon.

Koubek and Wallace gained the title round yesterday by eliminating H. Miller and E. Roche, of the P. A. A., 21-16, 21-14.

In the class A squash racquet tourney W. D. Bickel, of the K. A. C., the defending champion, defeated George Kennedy, 15-18, 15-10, 15-12, 15-11, yesterday and will meet the winner of the C. A. Fagan-Gean Caspar match for the title at a date to be selected later.

PITT, TECH INVITED

BAXTER BOXES WINDUP IN ARENA RING

TONIGHT'S FIGHTS

Charley Baxter vs. Willard Brown and Jimmy Thomas vs. Jimmy Sayers, 10 rounds each, and Mike Scarpuzzi vs. Johnny Durso and Joe Lovasky vs. Bearcat Jones, 6 rounds each, Arena, North Side.

Pitt vs. Duquesne, Stadium Pavilion.

Primo Carnera vs. Ernie Schaaf, 15 rounds, and Adolph Heuser vs. Harry Ebbets, 10 rounds, Madison Square Garden, New York.

Pittsburgh's third boxing show of the week awaits the fans at the Arena, on the North Side, tonight, when Matchmaker Jim Buchanan offers two 10-round battles and two six-rounders.

Charley Baxter, promising young local junior-welterweight, meets Willard Brown, of Indianapolis, in the windup, and Jimmy Thomas, local Negro bantam, is in with Jimmy Sayers, of Lafayette, Ind., in the other top number.

Mike Scarpuzzi, of Canton, O., boxes Johnny Durso, local lightweight, and Joe Lovasky, of Kittanning, and Amos (Bearcat) Jones, East End Negro, box the two preliminaries, the card getting under way promptly at 8:30.

Baxter and Thomas and their work are well known to the fans. As for their opponents, Brown is the claimant of the Indiana welterweight title, with bouts to his credit against Harry Dublinsky, Pee Wee Jarrell, Lou Terry, Santiago Zorilla, Danny Delmont, Lou Jallos, Mickey Cohen and others, while Sayers has boxed Willie Davies, Happy Atherton, Frankie Jarr, Luis Carpentero and others of this caliber.

Announcement was made today by the Arena owners that Jim Buchanan has resigned as matchmaker and Lew Raymond, whom he succeeded, will be back on the job after tonight's show.

Between Rounds

Dan Billick, who defeated Jimmy Gilligan, although the latter got the decision, in their bout in the Moose Temple Wednesday night, wants another crack at Jimmy.

The cold weather killed the crowd for the Moose show and it didn't take in enough to pay off obligations. The officials will get their money at the Boxing Commission office today.

Primo Carnera will have approximately 50 pounds on Ernie Schaaf in their 15-round elimination bout in Madison Square Garden, New York, tonight, but Ernie is a 7-5 favorite in the betting. The winner is supposed to box Champion Jack Sharkey in June.

Battling Gizzy is to go through with bouts against Chino Alvarez in Savannah, Ga., and Battling Shaw in New Orleans, after all. He will leave Sunday night to box Alvarez next Thursday and will proceed on to New Orleans for the Shaw bout, which probably will be fought on February 27.

Speaking of Gizzy, Eddie Zivic is hot on his trail now. He thinks he is ripe to "take" the Battler, and Manager Luke Carney has steamed up a couple of the promoters on the match. Eddie showed a lot of class in stopping Dom Asto at the Moose, Wednesday night. It was the main bout, only his eleventh ring engagement, and his tenth victory in a row. He made his professional bow in the game ring last winter and was charged with a defeat by Howard Scott, of St. Louis, in a close battle. Brother Frizzie, who knocked out Steve Senich in the semi-final, has scored eight knockouts in 12 professional bouts, three of them clean one-punch affairs such as the body blow which doubled up Senich.

The card has been completed for the La Barba-Butch show at the Garden, Monday night, with the signing of Red Bush, Cumberland middleweight, to box Anson Green, Homestead Negro, in the eight-round semi-final. Tenny DiPiero and Chuck Mullins are in the opener and Tony Constantino and Ray Winbush in the second bout.

RICE GRIDDERS SUSPENDED

HOUSTON, Tex., Feb. 10.—(AP.)—Rice Institute's football hopes for next season were all but blasted today.

Dean R. G. Caldwell said eight players, including four stars, had been suspended indefinitely on charges of violating institute rules in connection with the recent mid-year examinations.

Those who will go out, under terms of the order, are John McCauley, Bill Wallace and Kelly Scott, outstanding backs; Ox Hinman, star tackle; DeWitt Knight, end; Bill Saddler, end; Melbert Bale, guard, and Jim McLaughlin, reserve back.

The suspension will be effective at least for the remainder of the school year, which will make the men ineligible for competition in the Southwest Conference next season, Dean Caldwell said.

Britons Near Title In Cricket Match

BRISBANE, Australia, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—Australia got off to a good start in the fourth cricket test match with England today, scoring 36 runs without loss of a wicket up to the lunch interval.

England won two of the first three matches and needs only one more victory to clinch the "ashes," emblematic of world cricket supremacy. Five test matches in all will be played.

Australia won the toss today and went to bat before 20,000 spectators in extremely hot weather.

PONZI BOOSTS LEAD

Dykes and Haas Sail For Sox Training Camp

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—Jimmy Dykes and George (Mule) Haas, former Philadelphia Athletic stars, who have been sold to the Chicago White Sox, sailed for Los Angeles on the liner President Pierce en route to the Sox training camp at Pasadena.

Taking the longest way round to get to the camp, the two Sox athletes will arrive in Los Angeles February 26 with a five-day leeway, for they are due to report to Manager Lew Fonseca March 1.

Grid Rules Chiefs Open Annual Parley

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—The wise men of football gather today to determine what changes, if any, are necessary in the code of the gridiron.

The intercollegiate football rules committee, under the chairmanship of its new head, Walter Okeson, Lehigh University, who succeeded to the chair at the death of E. K. Hall, opens its annual three-day session to consider proposals for alterations in the football law.

Some proposals already have been submitted by advisory bodies, and some, originating with the committee, will be discussed, but it is improbable that any drastic changes in the code will be made.

CELTICS DEFEAT PATERSON FIVE BY 27-17

There may be basketball teams parading about the country today capable of giving the Cleveland Rosenblum-Celtics a ball game, but the Paterson (N. J.) outfit is NOT one of 'em.

The Patersons and Celtics worked out in Motor Square Garden last night in the city's first professional contest of the year, and the Celtics won under wraps, 27 to 17. Despite the frigid weather, which was far more conducive to a session with a good book and a mug or two of hot lemonade by the old home fireside than to one in the chilly confines of the Garden, some 800 of the faithful turned out for the game.

HICKEY LEADS SCORERS

The Celtics displayed their same all-round class in whipping Paterson. Nat Hickey, veteran guard, was the high point man of the game, flipping seven field goals and two fouls for a total of 16 points, one less than was scored by the entire Paterson team. Carl Husta, himself a former Rosenblum star, led the point-grabbing for Paterson with four field goals.

Paterson did not fetch along two of its highly touted stars, Borgmen and Shuchman, and at no time looked like a team capable of giving the Celtics a ball game. Tiny Hearn, the rangy eastern center, had height, but was behind Herlihey, the Celtic pivot man, all night. The famed Davy Banks, Pete Barry and Dutch Dehnert (Dutch was playing a forward last night) still comprise the most formidable trio in basketball. The lineup:

Celtics.	G.	F.	Pt.	Paterson.	G.	F.	Pt.
Dehnert, f	1	0	2	Husta, f	4	0	8
Barry, f	0	0	0	Artus, f	1	0	2

VANITIES IN VICTORY

In a preliminary, the Goldenson Vanities had their dainty hands full in beating the Riggs-LaMar girls, of Akron, O., 28 to 21. The lineup:

STOCKS SLIDE UNDER LIGHT PRESSURE

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—The stock market paused today after yesterday's upswing, and prices slid back from fractions to a point here and there, under pressure of light flurries of profit-taking.

Week-end mercantile reviews reported a sizeable pickup in sales of seasonal merchandise at retail, and corporate news included another regular quarterly dividend in Beechnut Packing's announcement of a 75-cent disbursement. United States Steel report of a decline in its unfilled tonnage, however, tended to counterbalance these more favorable aspects of the news.

The steel shares held up fairly well, showing only small fractional recessions. Tobaccos again encountered considerable selling, some of it believed to be for short account, and losses of a point or so appeared on American and Liggett & Myers Class "B" issues. Other issues off major fractions to a point included Union Pacific, United Aircraft, Case and Air Reduction. American Telephone dipped a fraction, although its annual report was generally interpreted favorably. A little fresh activity appeared in some of the non-ferrous metal issues. United States Smelting rose 1½ and Phelps Dodge ½.

Wall street was busy speculating as to the probable recommendations of the National Transportation Committee, expected next week, and one news ticker item said the report was expected to score managements for not eliminating competitive waste more effectively, to urge giving up of unprofitable branch lines, and scaling down of capital structures, where necessary, among other things. In most quarters, a "constructive" report was expected.

United States Steel's decline in unfilled tonnage in January had been rather confidently forecast in some quarters, where the belief had been expressed that new business had not fully justified the step-up in production. Tonnage decreased 69,496 tons to 1,898,644 tons as of January 31, which more than canceled the gains of the autumn months.

Important quarters in the oil industry felt that renewed stability should ensue, after the American Petroleum Institute's new agreement this week on a statement of principals. Some further gasoline price recessions were reported, but a firmer tone in the Texas crude oil market was reported, and there were rumors that at least part of the slashes in crude prices in the mid-continent would be restored soon.

Remarks of President Gifford in American Telephone's annual report were regarded as enhancing the prospect of maintenance of the regular dividend. He pointed out that the company had laid up surpluses through abstinence from melon cutting in boom times, and that the dividends were vital to the day-to-day living of the vast majority of the stockholders. Beechnut Packing ordered the regular quarterly of 75 cents, but overnight news included announcement that Case had ordered only $1 on its preferred stock, a reduction from $1.75.

Copper metal was reported a little firmer in European markets, but the domestic price still held at 5 cents, with business practically nil. The mercantile reviews reported a sharp pickup in retail trade, in response to the cold weather, and better movement of goods at wholesale, but said heavy industries were still sluggish. The Association of Cotton Textile Merchants said in a survey that economic improvement would uncover large shortages of goods.

COTTON JUMPS ON BUYING

The market worked up to 6.27 for May and 6.59 for October or about 9 to 11 points net higher. Prices were within a point or two of these figures at the end of the first half hour.

The early advance was checked by increased realizing. A little southern selling was also reported, but the offerings were taken on reactions of 5 or 6 points. At midday the market was quiet and steady, with the active months showing net gains of about 4 to 7 points, with May ruling around 6.22.

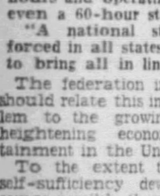
ECONOMIC RODS SHOW HUMAN RELATIONS

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—Stock prices, bank debits and gold movements are nothing more than symbolic reflectors of the changing relationships among human beings.

Economic tinkering which does not start and end with man is bound to be superficial.

Numerous dilletantes have offered remedies for curing unemployment. What do those most directly concerned think? An authoritative spokesman for labor in use and out of use is of course the American Federation of Labor. In the current issue of its organ—the Federalist—a plea is made for shortening the work-week to 30 hours in order to make allowance for automatic labor-saving machinery. The goal is to seek to apply scientific management to the central problem of balancing the effective demand for labor with the available supply.



Mr. Rukeyser

SEES MORE JOBS

After citing statistics indicating how the new standard was arrived at, the spokesman for labor concluded:

"With new labor-saving machinery continually increasing the labor surplus, the 30-hour week is none too short for a recovery standard. It could be the basis of getting men back to work and keeping them at work. The assurance of a job would release millions of dollars now being held in reserve and furnish buying power to speed recovery.

". . . If the 30-hour week standard is to be really effective, it must be applied on a nationwide basis. The records show clearly that individual action by industrial firms cannot be counted on to adjust work hours. Thousands of employers already see that work hours must be shortened. But what chance has an individual firm to adjust its work schedule to a shorter week when its competitors are lengthening work hours and operating on a 55 or even a 60-hour standard?

"A national standard, enforced in all states, is necessary to bring all in line."

The federation in its thinking should relate this important problem to the growing interest in heightening economic self-containment in the United States.

To the extent that economic self-sufficiency develops, it becomes possible through regulation progressively to raise domestic living standards.

'BUY AMERICAN' NEED

On the other hand, if the ideal of Adam Smith for free international trade without tariff barriers is to prevail, then the country must become reconciled to living standards set by competition with labor in Tokio, Brussels and Manchester.

If the American public responds to the slogan "Buy American" and the American Congress gives adequate protection to American business, then in turn employers must be ready to pass along a large share of the benefits of labor. The social justification for a conscious policy of economic isolation will be to raise living standards. Likewise, business men, thus protected, will owe an obligation to American consumers to produce as cheaply as possible (consistent with high wages) through efficiency and mass technology.

To the exten that employers take a more humane interest in the welfare of workers, they will also be making capital secure. Investment becomes safer at a time when there is a well directed flow of adequate purchasing power to the vast multitude of consumers.

The Federation has computed that the 30-hour week standard, if it could have been applied last October, would have given jobs to more than half the 10,900,000 then unemployed. It would give employment for 6,600,000 more in industry, leaving 1,700,000 still unemployed by industry. Adding to them the 2,600,000 unemployed in other lines of work, the number still out of work would exceed 4,300,000. The latter, it was argued, would gradually be absorbed as industrial activity broadened, as it undoubtedly would as millions are redeemed from impecunious idleness.

STEEL ORDERS AT NEW LOW

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—(INS.)—Unfilled tonnage of the United States Steel Corporation dropped 69,496 tons to a new record low in January, it was announced today.

The decline, which was far more than Wall Street had expected, brought the corporation's backlog on January 31 to 1,898,644 tons. The previous record low was established at the end of July at 1,966,302 tons.

The unfilled tonnage at the end of January compares with 1,968,140 tons on December 31, 1,968,301 tons on November 31 and 2,648,150 tons on January 31 a year ago.

Wall Street had been anticipating a standoff in the backlog with some hopeful of an increase due to the rise in the steel industry's operations from around 12 per cent to 19 per cent last month. The tonnage figures indicate that the Steel Corporation went into its backlog to help put its operations up.

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—Demand for bonds was more selective today, and while many advanced, the general price movement was irregular. Continuing their see-saw movements of the last week, United States Governments worked to lower levels, following renewal of pressure on some of the Treasury issues, notably the 4¼s and 4¼s.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—Transactions in the most active bonds on the New York Stock Exchange today were as follows (000 omitted in sales columns; United States bonds in dollars and thirty-seconds of dollars):

RACQUET SQUAD SET

LOCALS DEPART FOR SQUASH TITLE PLAY

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Final selection of the squad that will represent Pittsburgh in the National squash racquet championships at the University Club in Detroit this week-end has been announced by Secretary W. McCook Reed, of the Pittsburgh Squash Racquets Association. Seven players will make the Michigan jaunt—two to compete in the National singles contesting and the remaining quintet to joust as a squad in the inter-city team title tourney.

Reed, the city singles premier, and Jim Ebbert, his husky teammate at the Pittsburgh Golf Club, will flaunt Steel City colors in the individual milling. In the interurban action, Bill Bickel, Keystone A. C. ace; Dr. Dave O'Loughlin, P. A. A. star; Joe Oliver, slim Pittsburgh Golf Club threat; Charley Fagan, veteran K. A. C. tactician, and Alex Robinson, Allegheny Country Club contender, will comprise the local entry and will lineup in the order here given.

STARS STAY HOME

Dave Gilmore, crack Allegheny southpaw, and Frank White, former National champion, will be prevented by business from joining the entourage. Loss of Gilmore and White costs the Pittsburgh delegation both power and experience and marks the first time in four years that Gilmore has missed the National event, while White has been absent from few titular conclaves since he copped the crown back in 1911.

Interesting to note—following as it does the proclamation yesterday that the Pittsburgh Tennis Association will seek the annual meeting of the U. S. L. T. A. for this city in 1934—district squash officials will make an effort to bring the racquet championships here just a year hence. Jack Kennard, athletic director at the Keystone A. C., is returning to his native heath for the impending trophy tussling and will join with Reed in boosting the Pittsburgh idea as a Keystone feature.

According to the dope, two new courts are in process of installation at the Keystone clubhouse. A national tournament requires no less than eight enclosures, however, which means that the Keystoners will still be a bit shy of the necessary total for handling a nationwide affair. Reed, though, declares that if Pittsburgh can cop the National dates, there is every probability that the Pittsburgh Club will renovate the two courts in its Penn avenue clubhouse to conform to official specifications, which would provide ample competitive facilities in the downtown area.

LOCAL TEAM STRONG

The Pittsburgh outfit that will begin battling tomorrow afternoon is perhaps the strongest that has ever gone forth from this territory. The performers have been practicing under the expert tutelage of Ben Pope on the Pittsburgh Golf Club board floors all week and appear in finest trim of the winter for their ordeal.

Bickel, O'Loughlin and Kennard leave for the scene of hostilities in the Kennard motor lorry about noon today. The remainder of the Steel Citians will travel by rail tonight.

Women Stars Meet For Crown Today

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—Miss Virginia Van Wie, the nation's woman golf champion, coasted into the finals of the annual mid-winter Southern California tournament in the defense of one of her crowns.

The Chicago woman, who won the local championship with ease last year, defeated Mrs. Roy Green of Culver City, Cal., yesterday, 7 and 5, while Mrs. L. D. Cheney, of San Gabriel, Cal., advanced to the finals by winning over Mrs. J. G. Wittig, of Los Angeles, by the same score.

Stella Walsh Shows Complete Recovery

WARSAW, Poland, Feb. 10. — (AP.) — Stanislawa Walasiewicz (Stella Walsh), former Cleveland girl athlete and Olympic sprint champion, today was reported to be entirely recovered from the injury to her ankle and again in training for further track and field feats.

Miss Walasiewicz twisted her ankle while vacationing at the mountain resort of Lvov and it was thought for a time she might be permanently disabled.

Shaughnessy Gets Early Challenge From Stagg

CHICAGO, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—Clark Shaughnessy, just signed as coach of the University of Chicago's football squad, already has a challenge on his hands—from none other than A. A. Stagg, his predecessor on the Midway, who will coach at the college of the Pacific, Stockton, Cal., next fall. Stagg said:

"I extend my congratulations to Shaughnessy and wish him and the university well.

"Tell him for me that the College of the Pacific challenges him to a game at the earliest possible time. We're not afraid of the Chicagoans, even if they have more students than we have. We're fighting cocks out there on the Pacific."

Shaughnessy has not yet decided when he will come to Chicago, but he plans to come in plenty of time to prepare for spring practice, which will start about April 3, the time of the opening of the spring quarter.

THE GREAT OUTDOORS

By GIB MARSH

Sportsmen are somewhat concerned about the recent presentment to the lawmakers of the state of a measure to permit the use of the automatic rifle in the big game woods of Pennsylvania. At every session of the lawmakers at Harrisburg such measures are introduced, not only for automatic rifle, but for the automatic shotgun as well. Although the recent proposed amendment for the use of the automatic rifle provides for a reduced magazine capacity of two cartridges, which is done by plugging the magazine and permits only two shots, there is no serious reason to believe the measure will advance farther than a committee hearing.

Whether it is an automatic rifle or shotgun, neither is a sportsman's firearm for big game hunting or upland small game shooting. The automatic shotgun is desirable for waterfowl shooting, chiefly for killing cripples. However, since the reduced day's bag limit on waterfowl, such a gun no longer is necessary. There is nothing the automatic rifle can perform which cannot be duplicated by either bolt action rifles or those rifles equipped with lever or fore-end actions for ejecting cartridges.

The War Department does not even approve of the automatic rifle as a military weapon. True, the self-action ejecter tends to expedite the handling of the rifle, but it must be remembered the shooter is required to pull the trigger on each shot and not just hold the trigger and permit the bullets to spit out of the barrel, which is the general opinion. And it is a difficult firearm to handle with accuracy, which the writer has observed many times at trap-shooting tournaments, in the shooting of the double-target events.

In the hands of an expert hunter, the automatic shotgun is a game bag filler for the reason that all that is required of the handler is to point accurately and pull the trigger. The shooter is not handicapped by operating any shell-ejecting devices. But it is not a sportsman's firearm, and it is dangerous to operate except in the hands of an expert. The best use for the automatic rifle is for defensive purposes for highway patrolmen or riot-breaking squads. It is chiefly a police weapon. There is no likelihood of the lawmakers of Pennsylvania legalizing its use.

REDHEAD

CHAPTER XI.

As a matter of fact—and this was a bitter reflection—women liked best the men that took them lightly, that played with them. They always liked those. Charlie was going to see a lot of Sue. Every day, all day. He felt now that the more he saw of her in the intimate details of everyday life, the more he'd come to despise her for that emotionalism and instability. He'd all his life idealized women. But no more! That was over. Over with a bang.

Oh, those long hours of solitude, of moods, of thought . . . sitting at the wheel; or stretched out beside it, hands under head, watching the neatly fitting sails and the fathomless sky above them; or snatching a few hours of sleep in the cabin, secure in the knowledge that the first unusual movement or sound would waken him; dreaming queer, uncomfortable dreams!

She liked being kissed, she'd said once. Well, this boat was one place where she'd find none of that. He'd knock some sense into her. She'd see. His nature wasn't going to change with every passing breeze.

Early in the morning, he cooked up some breakfast. Through a closed door he tried to persuade her to try a little strong coffee. She ordered him away. Screamed it.

FINALLY TAKES FOOD

So he went. One of these days she'd be hungry. He didn't care. He was interested in the discovery that he could cook, with only a little difficulty, on this beamy craft, even in fairly rough water. A grand little ship! He exulted over her, as he cleaned up and returned to the cockpit.

On the third day Sue accepted a little food. But she wouldn't let him see her; shouted at him, instead, impatiently, to leave it there for her outside the door.

On the fourth day, the Sue entered the Gulf Stream. The two days that followed were a fascinating sort of nightmare. Edging along, under staysail and mizzen, against current and wind; taking a continual pounding right on the nose; averaging a mile on the southern course to three eastward. And not once, in all this time, did he so much as catch a glimpse of the girl in the forward cabin. Not much cooking could be done now. Once he managed to brew strong tea and fill a vacuum bottle. This, with sausage and hardtack in a candle-box, he passed in to Sue, coolly opening her door a foot and wedging the box about with cushions on the floor. He didn't even look up. And Sue didn't speak.

On the sixth day, running out of the Stream, the sea chose to exhibit its pleasanter aspect. The air was sunny and dreamy and warm. The boat loped lazily, comfortably southward, with an easy beam wind from the west; cabin ports and skylight and forward hatch open, bedding on deck for an airing. Charlie, in clean white cottons, curled up beside the wheel, was writing up his log when he heard sounds in the cabin. He looked down there and caught a glimpse of white. Then she appeared in the companion way. Instantly he resumed his writing. But he had seen that she had on one of the sea suits, blouse and trousers. Her head was bare. She looked very slim and pale. No make-up, that was what made her look different.

CHARLIE DISILLUSIONED

She stood for a brief time in the cockpit, holding to one of the doors and gazing forward. Her eyes rested on his bedding, spread out on the cabin roof. She considered it, and then ducked below. Soon he saw her head in the open hatch forward. She was shoving her own bedding out on the deck. She climbed out after it. Noting that she was wearing sneakers and wouldn't slip (she'd always been active and light of foot; played pretty good tennis and that sort of thing). Charlie wrote coolly on. There was a rail of wire rope, anyway, run through the stanchions of galvanized iron.

She stretched out, up forward there. It was midmorning, and the staysail threw a pleasant shadow. He glanced at her now and again; she wasn't looking his way. He found himself thinking of her, of all women, not as remotely angelic creatures, not even as persons, but as queerly shaped, rather useless animals. Useless, except for the one purpose of alluring and attaching the necessary male, producing children, and then, intensely, fiercely, rearing these.

Charlie, it will be noted, had boxed the emotional compass. He was now a bitterly disillusioned young man. And there is no bitterness in life that is quite so heart-breaking as the bitterness of youth.

SUE FINDS RADIO

She'd have to have food. He slipped below and started the coffee and a stew of canned beef, potatoes, onions and carrots. His eyes rested on the radio, and he gave it thought. He hadn't once turned it on. She'd been in the main cabin on only two occasions, and briefly; perhaps she hadn't noticed it. He considered covering it with a bit of cloth. Undoubtedly their two names could be heard over it every evening, along with the names of lost children and wanted criminals. But then he decided to leave it exposed. Let her hear anything she liked. He didn't care.

When the stew was ready, he simply brought his share of it up into the cockpit. And called to her—"There's food on the stove, Sue!"

She made no answer. For perhaps 10 minutes she merely lay there. But then, with a nonchalant manner, she let herself down the forward hatch. Through the open companion he saw her entering the cabin. She came to the steps and closed the doors with a firm little slam.

She was a long time in there. He heard, suddenly, the strains of a jazz band. She'd found the radio!

It was nearly an hour before she appeared again up forward, lit a cigaret, and stretched out comfortably. She didn't ask about her broken holder. Watching her, he took the broken pieces from his pocket and in a little flare-up of anger threw them overboard. Then he went below to wash the dishes, only to find them neatly put away and the stove and sink cleaned up. Well, that was something!

As evening approached—with an immense glowing orange of a sun sinking into a sea of burnished copper—and just as he was beginning to think that a bit of dinner would fit in rather nicely, the pleasant odor of cooking floated to his nostrils. She had finally come to the conclusion, then, that she might as well make herself useful. Well, that would help

France's despotic King Louis XIV (1643-1715), whose governing principle—"L'etat c'est moi" (I am the State)—made his least personal action, such as taking a meal, a state affair of grave importance. A generous protector of literature and art, he welcomed famous poets such as Corneille and Racine, authors of tragedies, and Moliere, father of the French comedy, to his table. Investigatorial Firemen Arrive Too Late

Probably the finest piece of fruitless fruit cake we have seen is the Ivar Kreuger investigation.

Ivar was the immigrant boy who landed on our hospital wharves without a cent of our money in his pockets.

He went home again with his saddle-bags stuffed so fat it looked like he was riding three horses.

Ivar was like a grandma giving us our spring sulphur. Only Ivar gave it to us on the ends of little sticks.

He nailed us for fifty million dollars and left us holding the burlap.

They tell us that he juggled billions like a rubber ball on a seal's nose. He forged bonds, copied certificates and issued personal liberty loans. If he needed money he printed it while ringing for breakfast.

shellacking the orphan and the widow for the price of one admission.

Stirring up muddy waters makes soup for nobody.

Ivar has gone to his reward. He is in heaven, we hope.

But we suspect that Ivar has established a new low for a man on high.

He trimmed our neatest bankers and tied their whiskers into a lovers' knot. They not only fell for his line, but they tossed in a few extra bounces.

We don't indorse a congressional investigation of his activities. There might be some more poor little match boys down in Washington taking notes.

It Will Mean a New Era

A Generous Attitude Towards Our Latin Neighbors Is Needed to Promote Reciprocity.

The improvement of mutual relations and the advancement of our commerce with Latin America constitute the special task of several admirable organizations.

They are volunteer associations of industrialists, investors, foreign traders, publicists, authors, teachers and prominent members of the legal, engineering and other professions.

The Committee on Inter-American Relations and the National Foreign Trade Council are prominent among such organizations. Their activities are enlightened and useful. They are pursued with diligence, and within the limits of their possibilities are effective.

Such voluntary efforts, praiseworthy as are their objects, can however go only SO FAR without intelligent governmental support.

It is all very well to seek, by the dissemination of accurate information, to correct the mutual misapprehensions which often tend to misunderstanding and estrangement among peoples who should be friendly.

Educational campaigns which aim to familiarize nations with the institutions, life, habits and business practices of other nations have abundant justification.

The circulation of accurate news, the suppression of prejudiced misstatements, the combating of hostile propaganda, the promotion of travel and intercourse, are all desirable objectives. A better psychological understanding of the United States by Latin America will of course improve conditions.

But we cannot content ourselves with objectives so limited.

Each, no less than ourselves, is animated by the desire that their people shall subsist in comfort and attain happiness and some measure of escape from the grim pressure of the human lot.

They, no less than we, desire to be nationally prosperous—to see their trade broaden and thrive and their people grow in well-being and independence.

It is not enough that the nations of Latin America should look upon the United States as affable and courteous.

We must be capable of intelligent co-operation with them in matters of mutual concern. We must meet them with OPEN MIND—and with OPEN HAND.

Our legislation, primarily in the field of tariffs must avoid every unnecessary restriction. Our reception of their products must be as generous as it can be made, without the sacrifice of those basic and elemental protections which every nation will concede to be within the right of every other to retain.

We must develop the CAPACITY TO LEGISLATE with reference to the BROAD OBJECTIVE.

We must learn to gauge public measures by their effect upon the GENERAL WELFARE and NOT SACRIFICE the far-reaching benefit of the nation as a whole to the SENSITIVENESS or the selfish outcry of the small, the particular or the local interest.

The United States CANNOT BE GREAT by METHODS that are PETTY. We cannot do the big things if we exhaust our energies in doing the little things.

PAN-AMERICAN RECIPROCITY is A GLORIOUS OBJECTIVE. If realized, it will spell a new era for the world.

If this country should be instrumental in bringing it to pass, it would mean new greatness for us and our sister republics—to say nothing of a soundly RESTORED and GREATLY EXTENDED PROSPERITY in which all would participate.

Investigate, Mr. Park!

The Public Expects the District Attorney to Find Out Who Are the Monaco Club "Higher-Ups."

District Attorney Andrew T. Park's strange reluctance to summon before the grand jury witnesses for questioning concerning the Monaco Club is causing comment. His excuses for failing to act are not impressive.

The fact was repeatedly and prominently published in the newspapers that the Monaco Club was a speakeasy and gambling house. Its location, on Forbes street, across from the Oakland Police Station, was given. The fact that Senator James J. Coyne had visited the place was published.

Nevertheless District Attorney Park, with a force of county detectives at his disposal, did not interfere with the club's unlawful operations. Neither did the city police nor the constables of that bailiwick, though that was more or less to be expected. But Park had raised hopes since his election that he might yet prove a militant foe of predatory racketeering.

The question is now being asked if these hopes were excessively optimistic. It is being recalled that the Volpe gang of racketeers supported Park when he ran for District Attorney and that one of the Volpes presided at a meeting which Park attended. It is being recalled that Park had to be prodded into prosecuting Mayor Charles H. Kline and B. L. Succop, former Director of Supplies, for malfeasance, and did not act, although evidence against the two officials was published daily in the newspapers for weeks, until a Citizens' Committee of influential citizens was organized to force action.

The Monaco Club scandal was brought to a climax when Judge Frank P. Patterson, unwilling that the impudent challenge should go unanswered, brought in state police from Reading, who raided the resort, confiscated wines, liquors and gambling paraphernalia, and arrested a dozen bartenders, croupiers and the like.

With all this evidence at his disposal Park is expected by the public to find out who are the "higher-ups" and how they came for so long to enjoy immunity from prosecution.

Curing Insanity

The Parole Record Indicates How Useful the Proposed Psychiatric Hospital Would Be.

The Department of Welfare reports that 11.87 per cent of the patients in the State mental hospitals were paroled last year, having recovered sufficiently to permit convalescence in their own homes.

Ten years ago only 4.5 per cent of the registered patients were on parole records as convalescents.

Improved methods of care and treatment—as, for example, through the use of occupational therapy, and the services of trained psychiatrists—are resulting in an increasing number of cures.

The University of Pittsburgh has donated a site, and architectural plans have been prepared, for a State psychiatric hospital in Pittsburgh, which it is declared will save many nervous patients from insanity. Senator Frank J. Harris is sponsoring the project.

It is to be hoped the Legislature will find the means of financing it.

The Fox and the Goose

By Nelson Harding

The goose has been in "conference"
With that old fox before.
Experience may teach it that
It should confer no more.

Its feathers have been so well plucked
That very few remain,
And if the goose would save what's left,
It won't go back again.

Honeymoon Weather—Signs

Ship captains may need barometers to warn them of the storms and breakers ahead. But on the troubled Sea of Matrimony, there are no such reliable instruments to guide the venturers.

Each "mate" must keep a weather-eye out for the signs and omens in the Honeymoon Sky. And they are plentiful!

For instance, it's time to hoist the storm signals, when the bride first notices that her darling never hangs up his wet bath-towels, fails to glance up when she enters a room, and reads aloud with high good glee all the funny sheet jokes about wives and matrimony.

And it's "cloudy with showers," when the bridegroom snaps at her for asking how he likes his eggs cooked; when he glowers at her for overdrawing at the bank, and groans when she dares to inquire if he slept well. In short, when he has his first "morning after the night before."

* * *

When she happens to be wrong in an argument and he no longer begs her to "forgive" him, or insists that it was all HIS fault; when her tears seem to roll off of him like water off a slicker—beware of shoals.

When the only way he can drive home a point in a disagreement of opinion, is to hammer at her vanity—look out for breakers ahead.

When she can hear the sound of his car on the gravel or of his key in the latch, and calmly turn to a new story in the magazine or the next sheet of the newspaper, without even glancing at the mirror to see if her hair is rumpled or her nose is shiny—the good ship Matrimony has been absolutely becalmed, and it's due to blow up, shortly.

When she gets him all wound up to tell her something that happened at the office and then gets bored because he takes so long to RUN DOWN—they are running on the reefs.

When she begins to consider him about as necessary as the "C" in Czar or the "K" in knowledge or the "P" in pneumatic, and he begins to regard her as an ordeal rather than an Ideal—then the moon has begun to wane.

* * *

And when he forgets the matutinal kiss and she doesn't even remember that he forgot it—then the Honeymoon is in total Eclipse!

* * *

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—Thoughts while strolling: They're rounding in from Florida, the soaks of sunshine, as black as Grandpa's straw hat. Peggy Joyce hasn't so many jewels. They just seem more assertive. George S. Kaufman's wife, Beatrice, has a Dorothy Parker rating for persiflage.

One-word description of Charles MacArthur—impish. It's been a long time since they've heard steel hammers rat-a-tat in midtown. The biggest physical specimen I know—Albert Keller, of the Ritz. He once startled the town by allowing women to smoke in his restaurants. Now look!

Lee Olwell, a Milwaukee (Wis.) boy, who made good in the city. All the dog shops which opened around Christmas are gone. Bert Lytell looks as young as he did 10 years ago. Grand actor, too. And about the most happily married of the Thespians. Kitty Kendall's wire-haired dachshunds. Cute!

One of my favorite people—Tommy Millard. He and Ed Hill are the sartorial dandies of journalism. Don Herold, wintering here from California. It isn't the same without Jimmy Walker. Like him or not, he gave the town a zip. And now he has written an old friend that he's very unhappy.

Like to chat with Sidney Solomon. He talks like stepping stones. That Mme. la Directrice, at Peggy Hoyt's, suggests the Statue of Liberty. H. T. Webster's wild mop of hair, if white, could be Mark Twain's. Wasn't the depression terrible? It nearly had me down!

I recently talked to a man whose left eye had been crossed since an illness at 15. During an exciting scene at a movie recently, a distracting noise behind caused him to turn his head quickly. There was a snap in his forehead, a blurred vision lasting until late the next day, then a mirror revealed that his eye was no longer out of kilter. Save a slight swelling, there was no inconvenience.

* * *

Broadway is wondering when Wilson Mizner is coming back, if only for a flying visit. He has been away the longest stretch of his exciting career—three years. As an entrepenuer of the celebrated Brown Derby, in Hollywood, he finds an outlet for his rich gift of gab almost comparable to old Jack's. Mizner always has believed there is only one career—living one's own life. And he's the only man I've ever known to do it.

* * *

Mizner, by the way, was greeting pals with "Hello Sucker" long before Texas Guinan was giving her jags a clangor to night clubs. He clipped it out of the side of a mouth which had been twisted slightly by a joust with footpads. Mizner's touch of defiant bravado was his cloak against Broadway panhandling. Hype Igoe and Tad used to jockey him into a corner of the Battling Nelson grill of Jack's and croon home-and-mother songs, as they said, "to make the big bum sniffle."

A garrulous stew, with a wandering foot, plumped into a beautiful girl at a table in Reuben's the other morning. "You're a peach," he said. "What's your name?" She simpered: "I'm Miss Council Bluffs, the Nebraska beauty winner, sir." And stared with unbelievable dumbness. All of which was the way of a talented young dramatic actress, side-stepping a bore, while her escort was telephoning.

I experienced what novelists call—"frozen horror" in a casual glance from a window early yesterday. On a high sill of a neighboring building, there appeared the figure of a man whom I supposed to be a window-washer. He looked about, then, in the manner of a diver, plunged head-long to the street. My horror ballooned and burst in a sort of mental skyrocket, and an arm, reaching to grasp a curtain, remained stiffly in mid-air at least two minutes.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

If you're worth your salt you want power. You want to have people love you, admire you, seek you out. You want to Do Something and Be Somebody.

All your life you have wanted this, and tried to achieve it. You feel that you have the makings in you—hidden talents that no one else suspects—but you don't know how to express them; how to put yourself across.

So you've watched popular and powerful people. You have tried to analyze their charm. You've read books which claimed to give the secret of success. You've copied pretty mannerisms and followed clever rules. But always in vain.

In spite of all your efforts, you're still a bystander, wistfully watching a big parade in which you have no place—and you're bitterly discouraged and rebellious. Must you always be like this? Isn't there any way to make your life register?

Yes, there is!

There's a way to put yourself on record; there's a way by which even the humblest and the poorest life may make a place for itself and achieve power; and that is—

"BE YOURSELF!"

That doesn't sound very exciting, does it? Nevertheless, it's the most potent magic on earth. It is the secret of all real power—and any man can possess that power. Each man is born with one precious, peculiar gift — THE GIFT OF HIS OWN SELF. He may never have another talent. He may live all his life in obscurity. Yet, if he will BE HIMSELF, he will always be a power among men.

FOR THE WORLD HAS DESPERATE NEED OF ORIGINALITY, AND IT HONORS AND REWARDS THE MAN WHO HAS THE HONESTY AND COURAGE TO DO THINGS IN HIS OWN WAY—PROVIDED HE DOES THEM FOR THE COMMON GOOD.

BUT THE MAN WHO DOES THINGS IN THE OTHER FELLOW'S WAY IS ALWAYS A FLOP. THE WORLD IS FED UP WITH IMITATIONS. LIKE NEAR BEER, THEY "LACK THE AUTHORITY."

Every man possesses one powerful and distinct gift—the gift of his own SELF. Why do you feel that you're different? Why have you always felt that you had "the makings" in you? Because you have! The only trouble was—you've never acted on your own hunch. You've never been content to Be Yourself or use your own makings.

As a consequence, instead of being yourself you're a synthetic hodge-podge,—an echo of all the books you've read, the movies you've seen and the people you've envied.

Stop it! Start now to Be Yourself. Face yourself, ruthlessly. Strip yourself of copy-cat camouflage. Discover and decide what you are, and what you can do.

"But I want to do such wonderful things!" you cry.

Of course you do. We all do. But "wanting to do wonderful things" won't buy you anything but grief, unless you have the inner capacity for the job. Have you? Have you actually the makings to be a powerful lawyer, or a great actress? Or are you just kidding yourself along with a pleasing pipe-dream, to hide the humilating fact that you're really fitted to be a good pipe-fitter or notions clerks?

Determine your own capacity, your tastes. Then be the self you're able to be. Live the life you're fitted to live. Do your own thinking. Express your own feelings.

Will you be able to put yourself across, then? You will. For then, at least, YOU'LL HAVE A SELF TO PUT ACROSS. And the world, which refused to accept a substitute, will turn eagerly to welcome An Original.

Action Demanded: Clear the Decks

By Claude G. Bowers

The "lame duck" Congress is drawing to an end with nothing much accomplished, and there is nothing remarkable about that. Conditions for important legislation have been bad for two years. No one party is in control of the Senate; the Democrats have a bare majority in the House; and the Republicans have the veto power in the Presidency. That condition does not make for legislation on any subject of a controversial nature having any political significance.

In less than a month these conditions will change. One party will have a safe majority in the Senate, a great majority in the House and in the presidency a man in harmony with the majorities in both branches of Congress. There will be a responsible leadership with power to back its responsibility. Then it will be up to the party in power. Just now no party is in power.

Confidence Is Necessary

Long ago it became evident that there will have to be a special session to meet the imperative demands of the times. It is said that this extra session may be called very soon after Mr. Roosevelt's inauguration. It will easily be one of the most important sessions in the nation's history.

There are certain things that will have to be done. One is that the process of repealing the Eighteenth Amendment must be started at once. Another is that the manufacture and sale of beer must be legalized at once. This alone is expected to yield a revenue of $150,000,000. It will put a great army of men at work, not only in the manufacture of beer but in making of crates, bottles, barrels and many other things.

This will be done; for if it is not done, in view of the positive pledge of the party in power, faith in the integrity of that party's promise will fail from the beginning. And confidence is necessary above all things else.

Cost of Government Must Be Reduced

Another major problem will be the balancing of the budget by cutting Federal expenditures to the bone. When everything possible has been done in this direction, if there is still a deficit, taxes must be increased to meet the need.

And there is another pledge to be kept—the cost of government must be reduced to the lowest figure compatible with the maintenance of all the proper functions of government. We have been drifting toward a paternalistic concept of government for years, and we are paying the penalty in the present crisis. If, as is claimed, the new regime can make a reduction of as much as three-quarters of a billion a year in the cost of government it will deserve well of the nation.

Mr. Roosevelt is to be given the power to act; he has the courage to act, and he has a plan. Unless the party he leads degenerates into an irresponsible mob unworthy of public confidence he will have the support of Congress.

Must Restore the Purchasing Power

And positive action must be taken for the uplifting of agriculture and the restoration of the purchasing power of the farmers. It has taken us 60 years to learn that you cannot reduce the basic industry of the world to bankruptcy without ruining every other industry. Jefferson knew it a century and a half ago. Whatever is necessary to restore the purchasing power of these 30 million people must be done; if something must be done that has no precedent it is because there is no precedent for the present plight of the tillers of the soil.

Nor need we do more for the farmers than we have done for the bankers and manufacturers in the past.

Private business—the insurance companies—have faced the realities in reference to the farm mortgages, and organized society, through the state, can do no less. There may be squealing and squawking from reactionaries and ultra-conservatives, but, as in a storm at sea when the ship is in peril, noisy obstructionists among passengers may well be locked in their cabins.

There Is No International Trade

Trade means prosperity.

The lack of trade means depression.

We are in peril today because there is no trade.

There is no trade of significance at home because of the loss of purchasing power in the thirty million farmers and in the thirty million involved in unemployment in industry.

There is no international trade because of the barriers erected against it in most of the countries of the world.

The problem is to restore purchasing power at home and markets abroad.

We can restore the markets abroad only through negotiations for such reciprocal concessions as will open them to trade. This will be tried.

The relief of the farmers and the restoration of their power to buy will help the merchants, increase the work of factories and restore great numbers of the unemployed to payrolls; and this will mean the restoration of their purchasing power.

New Regime Faces Grave Problems

Will that be enough? Probably not. Private industry must here co-operate with government—for this is a problem that ultimately involves the preservation or destruction of our present form of society. We are not impressed with many of the too fine spun theories of the technocrats, but they have one idea that we shall have to face—that a way must be found to readjust human necessities with machinery.

Thus the new administration goes in facing the gravest problems that ever confronted a new regime on assuming power. These are not party problems; they are national. They are not merely to determine which party wins the Congressional elections in 1934; they are to determine whether we as a people are to be able to turn back from the road to ruin.

Within the next few years we are going to begin to climb upward or we are going to slide downward at a more rapid rate, and mere partisan obstruction will be near treason. "This is the time for all good men to come to the aid of their country."

Common Horse Sense

And the debts? We are not going to restore prosperity by transferring the debts from Europe to our own people on the formula of Neville Chamberlain, who can see nothing to negotiate but that one thing. He may have been deceived as to American sentiment by attaching too much importance to the Foreign Legion here, which he snugly described as the only "enlightened opinion." In 1776 his forebears thought the "only enlightened opinion" was that of the Tories. Viscount Snowden knows that Chamberlain made a serious blunder.

There are features to the Snowden article attempting to smooth things over to which we cannot subscribe, some that seem absurd, but on the main point he has rendered a service to England by admitting that England must make trade, or other, concessions to us to cover our possible loss on the debts. But Snowden is not of the government in London now.

One thing we know—we are not going to balance the budget and put our industries in the way of profiting by the lowering of the barriers against trade merely by adding 11 billion dollars we do not owe to the burdens of our people. This may not seem to Mr. Chamberlain "enlightened opinion;" it is common horse sense. And that sometimes has been known to serve.

Once Overs

By J. J. Mundy

Are you one of those persons who picks up every new thing and rides it to death immediately?

You don't stop to think whether it sounds reasonable or not.

You don't stop to inquire who the people are who are responsible for this or that assertion.

You hail the new stuff and give it acclaim.

Are you really so gullible that you can swallow every statement that comes out?

Are you just standing around waiting to be swept off your feet by the new and strange ideas that are in the air today

Find out something of the background and history of the man or men who make such a universal appeal to be heard.

To be a sensation nowadays is about all that some folks want.

They will be noticed if they have to create a scene or a sensation by doing the unexpected.

Be sane enough to keep your balance and ask a few mental questions before you bite.

Calvin Coolidge's Advice

Only a few days before his death, Calvin Coolidge penned what proved to be his last message to the American people when inditing a letter to Bradley Kelley, of the American Radio News Corporation, director of Hearst station WINS, New York. The former President's farewell counsel was read over the radio by Claude G. Bowers, special writer for Hearst newspapers, as a part of a New Year's broadcast. Looking prophetically to the present day, it said:

"For the year 1933 it seems to me that we need co-operation and charity. The resources of our country are sufficient to meet our requirements if we can use them to help each other. We should co-operate to promote all kinds of business activity. We should do what we can in the way of charity. If all that is implied in these two words could be put into operation, not only would our economic condition begin steadily to improve, but our destitute would secure ample relief. I can think of no better resolution for the new year than to work in these directions."
